'Easy' Way Out of Crisis 'Vain Hope', Truman Says

Talk at Dedication Of Washington Statue Regarded as Defense Of Policy on Russia

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman told this country yesterday not to "be misled by the vain hope of finding quick and easy solutions" to the world crisis. The path to true peace, he said, would be a "hard" one.

Mr. Truman said in advance that his Washington's Birthday speech would be a straight-from-the-shoulder pronouncement on foreign policy. It turned out to be in part an answer to those who have been urging him to try a new and dramatic approach to Soviet Russia, or at least to "do something" because of the threat of the H-bomb.

He said that this country had tried, through the Baruch plan, to bring about an agreement on atomic energy in the United Nations. He said that it would continue to work wholeheartedly for an agreement, based on that or some other effective and workable plan.

Outcome Not Ours Alone

Then, apparently with Joseph Stalin in mind, he said:

"But we must remember that the outcome is not ours alone to determine. The actions of men in other countries will help to shape the ultimate decision."

Mr. Truman, referring to control of atomic energy, said that the "stakes are too large" for the United States to stand on pride of authorship. He added that this country asks only for a plan that provides an effective, workable system—"anything less would be a sham." This was taken as an invitation to Russia or any other nation to propose an effective substitute for the plan now before the United Nations, which calls for international ownership of atomic plants and a system of international inspection.

Statue Is Dedicated

The Chief Executive spoke at the dedication of a 17-foot statue of George Washington in the George Washington Masonic National Memorial in Alexandria. He took his theme from the situation that faced Washington in the infancy of the Republic.

"Our problems," he said, "are fundamentally the same problems that faced the first President of this Nation—to make democracy work and to defend it from its enemies."

Bluntly, then, he said that the most aggressive of these enemies was communism.

"Communism," he said, "seeks to induce men to surrender their freedom by false promises of a better life.

Rio Cuts Loose For 4 Days' Fun; 28 Die, 4659 Hurt

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 22 (AP).—In the sober calm of Ash Wednesday, this fun-loving city surveyed the cost of four days of carnival: 4687 casualties, including 28 dead.

Carnival, the period of feasting and merriment that precedes the fasting of Lenten season, began Saturday.

Automobiles mowed down pedestrians in the worst traffic jams in Rio de Janeiro's history, engendered by carnival parades. Heads were bashed in.

Five persons committed suicide.

Johnson Blamed

Delays Seen In Research On Missiles

Philadelphia, Feb. 22 (AP).—Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson is delaying research with his order for a review of the U. S. guided missile program, says a top-ranking weapons designer.

Dr. William A. Goss, co-designer of the first successful ram-jet engine, charged last night that constant interference and changes of direction were holding up progress in guided missile reasearch.

Dr. Goss, assistant supervisor of the guided missiles project of Johns Hopkins University, said:

"Secretary Johnson has been shaking the branches of the national military establishment from top to bottom every two or three months.

"If he doesn't stop, there just 'ain't gonna be no more' fruit on that tree."

Senate Votes Subpenas for Loyalty Probe

McCarthy's Charges On State Department Will Be Investigated

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday directed its Foreign Relations Committee to investigate charges of a Communist ring in the State Department and in so doing to subpena loyalty files on suspected individuals.

The resolution, which may shape up a head-on conflict between the executive branch and the Congress over Government files, was passed by voice vote after several hours of trivial, sharpshooting debate.

The original move to investigate charges first airec by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, jr. (R., Wis.) was made by Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.). But Lucas was forced to accept amendments to his original resolution, including one by Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) concerning loyalty files.

The text of the Ferguson amendment:

Americans Patrol As Casualties Rise In Eritrea Rioting

Asmara, Eritrea, Feb. 22 (U.P.) United States and British troops patrolled the bloodstained streets of Asmara tonight as the toll of casualties during two days of political riots mounted to 30 dead and 130 wounded.

The British administration imposed a curfew in the native quarter after new outbreaks this afternoon in which Christians, Moslems and terrorists battled each other with sabers, guns, clubs and hand grenades.

The 200 American troops here are communications workers with the air-sea rescue unit of the Military Air Transport Service. The British called them out yesterday to back up their 2000 occupation troops.

Cherry Tree Chopper Tells Truth and Profits

St. Louis, Feb. 22 (U.P.)—Ralph Wegener admitted on the eve of Washington's birthday that he tried to chop down his neighbor's cherry tree.

He testified in Magistrate Court that the tree's branches hung over his fence and tore holes in the family wash. So, he said, he cut off some branches.

The court threw out the neighbor's $1200 damage suit and awarded Wegener $50 for damage to his laundry.

Recognition Of Ho by Tito Baffles West

Situation Like Three Players Moving on Single Checkerboard; No Pressure by U. S.

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia has given the West a pretty tangle to unravel by recognizing the Soviet-supported government of Ho Chi-minh in Indo-China.

Tito, a Moscow-trained Communist, broke with the Kremlin two years ago, is now classed among the "Fascist beasts" in Kremlin propaganda, and is seeking economic help from the West.

Ho, also a Communist, has won Russian recognition as the rightful leader of most of Indo-China, and is fighting a bitter guerilla war against 125,000 French and colonial troops.

Tito Knew U. S. Stand

Yet Ho has sent Tito a direct appeal for recognition, and Tito has agreed. The resulting situation is about as clear as a checkers game with three playing on the same board.

Tito took his step knowing full well that the United States regarded Ho as a puppet of Moscow and an instrument of Soviet expansion in southeast Asia.

The State Department said so officially when Moscow recognized Ho, and again when the United States, Britain and other countries recognized Ho's rival, Bao Dai, as head of the "legal" government in the largest part of Indo-China.

United States Ambassador George V. Allen said it once again when he learned from Tito personally about Ho's request for recognition. Allen did not try to deter him, it was learned yesterday; the United States regards the act of recognition as a prerogative of any sovereign state, and it knows better than to try to pressure Tito into following American policy.

Tito to Go On Way

But Allen did try to convince Tito that Ho in far-off Indo-China was a dangerous Soviet agent, and not, as Ho himself has insisted, the leader of a genuine independence movement. Tito decided to recognize anyway.

What it proves, according to one authority here, is that Tito will continue to go on his own way no matter how bitter his quarrel with Moscow may become. He is still a Communist, although not subser-

Hearings Halted In Thousands of Deportation Cases

By The Associated Press

Deportation hearings involving thousands of aliens in all parts of the country have temporarily come to a halt, pending a revamping of Immigration Service procedure in such cases.

The Justice Department yesterday said the suspicion was general in the wake of a Supreme Court directive of last Monday to immigration officials not to take any short cuts in deportations, for the sake of economy or any other reason.

Scores of alleged Communists are included in the cases now halted. All are free on bond.

The Supreme Court called it improper to have immigration inspectors sit as examiners in the hearings.

The court asserted the examiners—having the functions of a judge—should be completely divorced from any investigative or enforcement duties.

The questions of inconvenience or expense, the court held, should not be considered.

Darden Favors End of Ban On Mixed Travel in Virginia

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22.—Colgate W. Darden, jr., former governor of Virginia and now president of the University of Virginia, testified before a House committee today in favor of the Boothe anti-segregation bill.

The measure would abolish State law requiring separation of races on public transportation.

Darden based his support on his experience with war-time fuel rationing as governor.

"I found that segregation on buses wasn't enforced during rationing," Darden told the House Committee on Courts of Justice. "And I think the friction (caused by the segregation law) was dangerous, difficult and unnecessar."

Darden said he opposed a second bill introduced by Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria, to establish a State commission on race relations to study educational aand social problems between races.

"Setting it up will open the door for ceaseless agitation, with many troublesome and trivial things brought before it that would be to the advantage of neither the Negro nor white race," said Darden, who was subpenaed by the committee at Boothe's request.

The first word of opposition to the Boothe bills—a dozen witnesses at a public hearing last week supported them—came today

Stimson Heirs Sell Woodley; May Become a Private School

Historic Woodley Mansion and 17½-acre grounds will be purchased today by a group of Washingtonians

The 150-year-old Woodley estate at 3000 Cathedral ave., former home of Henry L. Stimson, Cabinet officer, will be purchased from Phillips Academy, Andover, today.

The property will be bought by Ned Bord, a director of Randall H. Hagner & Co., and an undisclosed group of associates.

It is possible that the Georgian manor house, summer home of four Presidents, and a portion of the estate, will be exchanged with the Maret School, Inc., 2118 Kalorama rd. nw., for its present plant and land, The Washington Post learned.

Bord last night declined to name the purchase figure, but from other sources it was ascertained that it is in excess of $200,000 cash.

Small Raises In Rents Faced By Virginians

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Owners of Northern Virginia's principal apartment developments were not yet ready yesterday to discuss whether—and how much—rents will be hiked when the State decontrol bill is signed.

The few who would, said increases would be moderate and still leave "old"—prewar and wartime—rentals cheaper than rents in newly erected apartments.

Governor Battle is expected to sign the Boatwright decontrol bill this week. The rent ceilings would then be lifted June 10.

Besides the rent hikes, the bill is creating these effects:

1. Pressure is building up for the Magruder bill. Introduced by Delegate J. Maynard Magruder, the measure would open the way for cities and counties to reimpose rent control. Support is also indicated for a Federal bill permitting towns in decontrolled States to adopt controls—a principal argument being the boost in rents in such areas already.

2. New interest in home buying. One of Northern Virginia's two largest home builders reported a new spurt in sales, partly caused by the decontrol discussions, and the other said it would undoubtedly stimulate interest in home buying.

3. In Washington, real estate forces, already impatient with city rent control, girded for a showdown fight to end it when the current bill runs out June 30.

End of April For Underpass, D. C. Guesses

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Dupont Circle underpass may not open to automobile traffic until the end of April, District highway and construction officials clearly indicated last night.

April 7 still is the official "completion" date, but it apparently depends upon whether you are talking about the underground or surface features of the project.

L. M. Hedgcock, District deputy engineer of streets, said:

"Weather permitting, we hope to open the surface roadway—that is, the circle flow as before—by April 7. That is when the John McShain Construction Co. hopes to finish the vehicular tunnel."

But before traffic may move underground the paving work must be completed, Hedgcock explained. Another contractor will perform this final phase.

The contract for underground paving, he said, will be awarded shortly on stipulation it must be completed inside of 30 days.

"We will make every effort to put the pavers to work even before the McShain company finishes its tunnel work," Hedgcock said, "and we believe this surfacing can be done in less than 30 days, possibly two weeks, after McShain winds up."

At best, therefore, the work schedule would set the underpass opening for April 21.

Horace Meyers, president of the Connecticut Avenue Businessmen's Association, last night reiterated hopes of Dupont Circle merchants that the underpass will be open for their planned Easter Parade on April 9.

"We certainly will not have our parade if the tunnel roadway is not operating," he said.

When McShain undertook the

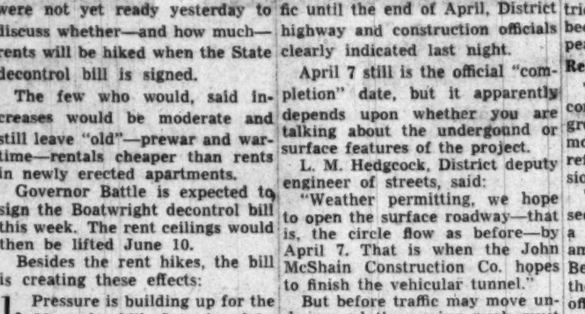
Sex Hormone Shots Make Hens Of Roosters and Vice Versa



Proud rooster looks like hen after female hormone injection

Chanticleer is no longer the big noise in the barnyard.

What it adds up to is that the rooster is no longer the cock of the walk, according to poultry scientists of Maryland University's extension service at College Park.

Dr. C. S. Shaffner, a studious endocrinologist, who likes southern fried chicken, announced yesterday that the sex of a rooster can be changed by injecting hen hormones in the neck.

Two or three days after an injection, Dr. Shaffner said, roosters cluck like hens and begin looking for places to lay eggs.

"The birds are not capons," Dr. Shaffner said, "but are cockerels, which have been injected with female sex hormones."

This scientifically encouraged metamorphosis, which is hailed as a boon to chicken farmers and a big fat hope for buyers, is simply done:

Hormones are removed from a hen, spun into a pellet, and with the aid of a hollow needle are injected under the skin of the neck very near to the head.

The hormones have no harmful effect on the bird, Dr. Shaffner said. The chicken is said to become tastier and more tender, with a decided increase in the amount of white meat.

During the process—which is completed within a week—the proud cock's comb shrinks like a violet and its tail feathers sink weakly.

Phone Strike Is Averted By Truman

Truce of 60 Days Accepted by Union In Walkout Called Over Nation Friday

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A plea by President Truman yesterday averted a Nation-wide telephone strike, scheduled to begin Friday, for at least 60 days.

The CIO Communications Workers of America announced acceptance of two-months' truce within five hours of the President's urgent request.

President Joseph Beirne of the CWA polled the members of the union's executive board, and wired the acceptance to the White House.

In accepting the truce, Beirne declared, the union was taking "one more step in our continuous effort to preserve industrial peace."

Second Postponement

It was the second time the union had postponed plans to stop work of 250,000 union members in Bell System subsidiaries, including the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. here. The walkout originally was set for February 8, but was delayed for 15 days to Friday, February 24, at the request of Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

President Truman personally intervened in the phone industry dispute yesterday, a few hours after top-level mediation efforts had broken down over a matter of geography. Mediator Ching, busy here with the coal negotiations, had asked Western Electric Co. to meet in Washington with Federal conciliators, and representatives of the union. Western Electric contract negotiations have been considered the key to phone peace.

Rejected Parley Here

The company refused to talk contract in Washington on the grounds it would be difficult to move its records here. The union refused to resume bargaining sessions in New York City.

The communications workers are seeking, virtually down the line, a "package" of contract benefits amounting to 15 cents an hour. The Bell System affiliates have rejected the demands, as well as a union offer to arbitrate the issues.

The President announced that he had received information from Ching that "insufficient progress" had been made in the phone negotiations, and that a strike was im-

Devereux, Marine Hero, May Run For Congress

Brig. Gen. James P. S. Devereux, USMC (ret.), hero of Wake Island, is definitely considering entering politics by taking the Republican nomination for Congress in Maryland's Second Congressional District, it was learned yesterday.

Devereux, who now lives at Stevenson, near Baltimore, said that "because of personal reasons," he had not yet definitely decided to run for the seat. It covers Harford, Carroll and Baltimore counties and part of Baltimore City. William A. Bolton now represents the district, which has been Democratic since 1931. Devereux formerly lived in Chevy Chase.

A reliable Republican source in Baltimore said General Devereux had evinced great interest in the nomination but wanted it without a primary fight. Theodore R. McKeldin, former Republican mayor of Baltimore, has lined up behind Devereux, in an attempt to swing him the important Baltimore votes. McKeldin said he was sure Devereux would get the nomination without a fight and would run.

Grand Jury Data Awaits Disposition By Federal Attorney

A summary of allegations of police corruption, compiled during the special grand jury investigation of Washington gambling, has been prepared in the office of the United States attorney.

More than two dozen police officers were said to be involved in protection payoffs, bribes or other irregularities, according to the grand jury document.

More than 100 complaints are included in the corruption report. They include broad generalities that corruption exists in the police department, cite specific names, addresses, amounts, and dates.

Some of the officers are identified. Others are indicated by badge number. Names of some officers appeared in several different complaints. Policemen of all ranks are included.

U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay yesterday confirmed existence of the corruption report, but its future remained a mystery.

False Teeth Are Anchored To Jawbone by Doctor Here

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Operations which anchor false teeth to the jawbone itself have supplied two Washington residents with teeth that stay put.

The recent operations, pioneering experiments in dental research, were performed at Garfield Memorial Hospital by Dr. William I. Ogus, oral surgeon.

One, the installation of a full set of upper teeth, is the first operation of its kind anywhere. It was performed on a woman who gagged on every replacement conventionally fitted for her mouth.

The second, implantation for a complete set of lower teeth, was done on a man who gummed his food for 15 years because he could not stand the mounted teeth most patients tolerate.

Both patients are now wearing new appliances, which seem to answer their problems, Dr. Ogus said, cautiously. He emphasized that the work is in research stage; that it may take another five years to perfect and fully evaluate.

The new oral surgery consists of exposing the jawbone and attaching a thin metal strip to its surface with four small screws. From this metal, four anchor teeth protrude through the replaced gum tissues.

The now permanently installed metal teeth become the foundation for detachable bridgework made to conform to the patient's gumline. "Female" porcelain caps in the bridgework fit over the "male"

Foes Defeat 'Gag,' Battle To Stave Off Vote on Bill

Powell Twice Loses On Limiting Debate; Substitute Measure Wins Some Favor

BULLETIN

House Southerners early today scored a short-lived victory against the FEPC bill. A coalition of Republicans and Democrats voted tentatively to stop consideration of the measure, but Administration forces promptly regained the upper hand. By a rollcall vote of 239 to 165 the House refused to adjourn and at 1 a. m., was still busily at work on amendments to the bill.

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

After more than 12 hours' continuous session, the House early today still was battling a Dixie filibuster against the Administration's fair employment practices bill.

Prospects of a before-dawn decision on the key civil rights issue became doubtful when the Administration lost a test vote on limiting debate.

The test came on a motion by Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr. (D., N. Y.) to limit discussion of the so-called speed amendment to 20 minutes.

With a large block of Republicans voting with the Southerners, Powell's effort to cut short the talk was twice defeated, 143-149 on a division vote and 140 to 167 on a teller count.

First Administration Loss

It was the Administration's first major set-back in a day and night of repeated Southern delaying actions. Earlier, the Truman Democrats won the first phase of their civil rights fight by forcing the FEPC bill before the House and into the amendment stage.

Members maintained their good humor throughout the longest continuous House legislating session in six years. Only rarely did the chair have to pound the gavel for order. Members left the chamber by relays to eat a hearty dinner. At least two of them returned with more than vitamin refreshment. Smiling friends quietly escorted these from the chamber.

Two noncompulsory FEPC substitute measures were thrown into the fight by Republican and Democratic moderates as the hour approached midnight.

One highly placed Southern Democrat predicted 95 percent of the Dixie contingent will swing to one of these as a last resort, possibly picking up enough GOP ballots to compromise the issue. Southerners would keep their sectional records straight by voting against the bill on final passage.

The favored substitute was offered by Rep. Samuel K. McConnell, jr. (R., Pa.). It sets up a five-man FEPC commission with investigative and fact-finding power but without any enforcement authority.

A slightly milder substitute drawn by Rep. Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) was introduced by Rep. Tom Steed (D., Okla.).

While the Administration's compulsory FEPC bill and the two possible compromises hung in a state of suspended animation, the Southern forces used every weapon in the House rule books to de-

Lid Reported On Miami Gambling For the Season

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 22 (U.P.) Croupiers and crap table men matched long faces today with sporting tourists who no longer could join the games in Greater Miami's gambling palaces.

The lid was on tight.

Game rooms at the "big three" clubs and those at all other gambling spots turned off their lights after Governor Fuller Warren flew in for a conference with the Greater Miami Crime Commission Monday.

The consensus among the gambling fraternity was that the lights were off for the rest of the season.

Gambling tourists visited neighboring Palm Beach and Broward County to the north.

Battle Cites Virginia Coal Emergency

Richmond, Feb. 22.—Gov. John S. Battle today declared an emergency exists in the Virginia coal industry, a technical invocation of authority granted by the current session of the General Assembly.

The effect of Battle's proclamation is to perpetuate the three-man Emergency Fuel Commission set up last September by Governor Tuck, and to continue State operation of a nonunion strip mine in Buchanan County, but with legislative sanction.

A spokesman in the Governor's office said it did not necessarily presage further seizure of mines by the State, since all but "two or three" strip mines are now in operation. The States does not anticipate seizure of deep mines, which are unionized, because of a lack of skilled labor.

He quoted a statement made by Battle yesterday: "Why seize mines for the sake of seizing mines, when there is sufficient production at the moment?"

Weekly production of Virginia's strip mines is now estimated at 125,000 tons. About half of this has been channeled through the Emergency Fuel Commission for "emergency needs." As of yesterday, the commission had filled all orders.

Mines were seized under the Tuck administration through interpretation of his "inherent powers" during an emergency.

The 1950 General Assembly gave the weight of law to the Governor, authorizing mine seizure and operation of the Fuel Commission if there is "substantial interruption or threat of substantial interruption" of coal production in Virginia.

C of C Asserts Lewis Verges On 'Blackmail'

By The Associated Press

A vice president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce yesterday said John L. Lewis used "tactics which are little more than legalized blackmail" to "create a crisis in the coal industry."

The chamber officials, Thomas R. Reed of Baltimore, said the United Mine Workers' president "has been successful in these tactics because he holds monopolistic power over an essential industry."

Reed urged Congress to "attack the monopoly evils wherever they occur."

His views were in a statement prepared for delivery to a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee that is holding hearings on a bill to apply Federal antitrust laws to labor unions. The bill is sponsored by Senator Robertson (D., Va.).

"The bewildering variety of three-day weeks, no-day weeks and what not * * * has finally succeeded in bringing national coal stocks down to a point where Lewis can assert his bargaining power aagin, not only against the coal operators but against the public as well," Reed said.

minent. Mr. Truman went on to state that "great damage to the public interest and welfare" would result from a strike:

"I feel very strongly that employers engaged in the operation of public utilities and unions representing their workers have a special and extraordinary responsibility to settle their difference by agreement and without resort to economic action which deprives the public of the benefits of essential services," the President said in a telegram to Bell and the ranking union officials.

Mr. Truman urged the parties to "weigh most thoroughly all demands and counter-offers, and asked that work and operations, without any interruption of telephone communications in the Nation, "under the wages, terms and conditions now in effect" be continued for 60 days from February 24. During that period, the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service will seek to help effect a settlement.

CWA, in accepting the President's truce request, made one exception, that involving 12,000 union workers of the New Jersey Bell System. That dispute is currently being processed under State mediation and arbitration laws.

In the Washington area, postponement of the strike action affects around 5500 union employes of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; 500 employes of Western Electric Co.; and 200 employes of the long lines division, American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

H. Randolph Maddox, C. & P. president, in a telegram to the President, said the company would abide by the truce. He pointed out that existing contracts with CWA-CIO divisions run to May, 1951. He added that the company would continue bargaining "in good faith."

Pennsylvania Non-Union Pits Kept Working As Miners Carry Guns and Tear Gas on Job

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LOADED FOR MINING—At the non-union E. M. Reed Coal Co. mine in Bethlehem, Pa., a guard cradles a rifle in his arms while workers load coal trucks. Non-union miners threatened yesterday to open fire if striking UMW pickets stepped on the property

Brookville, Pa., Feb. 22 (AP).—Shotguns, revolvers and tear-gas bombs were standard equipment today for nonunion miners digging coal despite the United Mine Workers' strike.

As bands of pickets continued to rove through western Pennsylvania's soft-coal fields, one strip or surface digger cradled a shotgun in his arms, slapped a pistol strapped to his waist and declared:

"Our jobs and our lives would not be worth a plugged nickel if we were not armed."

The only violence of the UMW strike has resulted from pickets trying to shut down scattered nonunion operations. Mines employing union diggers and not covered by new UMW contracts have not attempted to operate.

The 50-man crew of the E. M. Reed Coal Co., a strip operation at nearby New Bethlehem, nursed a small arsenal yesterday and worked a full day.

Other surface mines operating in this area—mostly those not so well armed—were forced to close down. They included the W. W. Carrier mine at Brookville, which said it suffered $5000 damage at the hands of pickets.

Twice a band of about 400 roving pickets went to the Reed mine and reportedly told the workers to leave their jobs.

The second time, Mine Superintendent Ralph Toy stepped atop a mound of coal and yelled:

"If any of you men step onto this property we are going to open fire.

"This is fair warning."

A State police car appeared and three troopers quietly watched the scene. The pickets climbed back into their autos and left.

Toy told a reporter:

"We'll keep on operating no matter how many pickets they have. They have got to keep off our property and we have enough guns to see that they do."

Truck driver George McNutt of New Bethlehem, who hauls coal for the strip mine, said:

"I drove two loads out this morning before the pickets closed in. That was enough for me. I won't get out on a highway against those guys no matter how many guns I've got."

State police cars followed the motorized bands of pickets everywhere.

Occasionally a caravan stopped while leaders decided upon the next destination. It's a hit-and-run proposition.

Chats and Insults

Sometimes the miners chatted amiably with the ever-present troopers.

Other times they heckled them and shouted insults.

The troopers quietly watched throughout.

Pickets indicated no eagerness to end their walkout. Said one striking miner: "This time there won't be any backing down.

"When this strike ends, it'll be on our own terms."

To this the nonunion miners replied:

"We want to work, but the pickets don't. "That's no reason for them to deprive us of making a living."

Coal Mines' Seizure Studied On Capitol Hill in Stalemate

mediate" consideration for a bill giving President Truman the authority to seize and operate the soft-coal mines. Such legislation is being drafted by Representative Cleveland M. Bailey (D., W. Va.), a strongly pro-labor Congressman who is also regarded as friendly to Lewis.

Lewis has stated in the past that his miners probably would be encouraged to return to the pits if the Government seized the mines and operated them in fact—that is, not only flew the American flag over the mines but also took the profits.

A new twist to the seizure angle was proposed yesterday by C. H. Snyder, president of the Sunnyhill Coal Co., New Lexington, Ohio. Snyder, who says he's an independent operator producing around one million tons of bituminous coal a year, has been visiting legislators on Capitol Hill declaring that if seizure must be undertaken, the Government should seize both the company and the union.

President Truman himself has thus far withstood all pressure for seizure and has made no legislative effort in that direction. It is believe he is waiting for the District Court here to complete its injunction action, taken at the President's request under the "national emergency" provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Judge Richmond B. Keech issued an injunction nearly two weeks ago. Although Lewis has twice sent out telegrams to his field lieutenants to end the strike, the men have refused to return to work. The union has been cited for contempt of court, and its officers have been called into court for Friday morning to try to explain why the union should not be punished.

Meanwhile, there were reports from the coal fields that FBI agents were seeking evidence against UMW leaders, including perhaps Lewis himself, as having failed to try genuinely to end the strike.

The United Mine Workers are seeking a wage increase of 95 cents a day, for a total of $15 a day; 15 cents a ton in welfare fund royalties, for a total of 35 cents; a shorter work day, and a 200-day guaranteed work-year.

The Progressive Mine Workers, who produce around 25 percent of Illinois' coal are seeking similar contract improvements.

John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association, charged before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee yesterday that the Truman Administration was guilty of "dilatory tactics" in dealing with the coal strike which would "lead one to believe that the Federal Government condones what is going on." The subcommittee is holding hearings on legislation to make unions subject to the antitrust laws.

Other coal developments yesterday:

Unless coal comes through by the end of this week, drastic cutbacks, as much as 75 percent, will be announced by some steel mills, it was estimated by Iron Age, trade weekly. Diminishing coal supplies may force Packard Motor Car Co. to halt production on March 6, it announced.

Northern Indiana Public Service Co. asked for a cutback of 25 percent in power used by the industrial plants it serves.

New York's Legislature unanimously gave Gov. Thomas E. Dewey emergency powers to seize private coal stocks and to clamp price controls on supplies in the State.

In St. Louis, the Citizens Fuel Committee wired President Truman that the situation there is "critical" for lack of coal. Public schools have been closed for the week.

Many industries and more than 50,000 private homes were without power in Cleveland when the city light plant failed because it was forced to use low-grade coal. Emergency fuel rationing has been ordered for householders. Police-inspected coal rationing was ordered in Muncie, Ind.

Fifty schools were closed in Illinois, giving 24,000 students an unscheduled holiday.

Another instance of violence was reported, this time near Price, Utah. Operators of nonunion coal mines called for police assistance after one of their truck drivers was wounded by the gunfire of roving pickets.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad opened an elaborate exhibit in Chicago aimed at stimulating bituminous coal sales. After a preview run in Chicago, the exhibit will be shipped to Baltimore for dedication and formal opening of a tour.

called it—the chemical capon—should be killed and dressed within five or six weeks. If allowed to live the cock once again regains its proud bearing.

Similarly, hens take on the aspects of roosters, when injected with male hormones. They become assertive, begin to crow.

Dr. Shaffner, who has been doing research on the caponette for three years since he came to Maryland from the University of Purdue, declared that Iowa's wingless chicken was just a passing fancy of the poultry farmer. Sooner or later, almost every enterprising poultry farmer tries his hand at crossbeeding to poduce a wingless, fatter bird, he said. Dr. Shaffner tried it once himself.

Here's One Answer To Coal Shortage

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—A State official, who preferred to remain anonymous, today offered a suggestion to the Federal Government on the growing coal shortage.

"Burn potatoes," was his solution.

metal teeth in snap-on fashion to give a natural appearance.

Though most persons today can wear conventional false teeth in relative comfort, some either through their own faults or the dentists', cannot. Chief complaint is the bulk required for today's false teeth bases which override the gums and give many wearers the discomfitting feeling of a mouth-full-of-teeth.

The false teeth in the new bridgework, however, are affixed to a thin metal strip fashioned to the patient's gumline. The result is an appliance far more comfortable and far less likely to attract attention, both Washington patients agreed.

The surgery marks the third pioneering dental research project for Dr. Ogus. He also pioneered in immediate dentures, in which false teeth are made before extractions and installed immediately after extractions.

And in the middle 1920s, Dr. Ogus, in collaboration with Dr. Elmer Brown of Trenton, N. J., developed an electro-surgical knife to do for tooth and gum repairs what Dr. Howard Kelly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, was doing with a larger instrument for other parts of the body.

In 1935, Dr. Ogus opened the Ogus Free Institutional Dental Clinic, at 1832 I st. nw. Fourteen charitable organizations are served by the free dental clinic he has operated there ever since.

British Liberals Make Coalition Bid

London, Feb. 22 (U.P.). — The once-powerful Liberal Party offered tonight to form a coalition with Labor if neither the Laborites nor the Conservatives win a majority in Thursday's parliamentary election.

The Liberals made it a condition that the Laborites suspend their plan to nationalize the iron and steel industry.

The offer was made while political experts were predicting that the election might be so close that neither Labor nor Conservatives would hold a majority in the House of Commons of 625 seats.

It generally was forecast the election would be the closest since 1923, when Labor formed its first government as a distinct minority, and depended on the Liberals for support.

The polls open at 2 a. m. EST in an election which party leaders, exhorting to their workers to get out every vote, call the most important in British history. By 10 p. m. EST the trend of this test between right and left may be apparent. The final result cannot be known before Friday.

A bare majority in the new House will be 313 seats. But 30 to 35 more will be needed for a working majority. The Liberals have been talking quietly of a comeback. In the 1945 election they polled 2,227,400 votes to get 12 seats. Labor, with little more than five times as many votes—11,967,985—won 393 seats.

The Liberals have put up 478 candidates. In the 1945 election they put up only 300.

Hoffman Plan

Aid for Any Idled Under ECA Asked

Paul G. Hoffman, the Economic Cooperation Administrator, proposed new measures yesterday to help American workers who might lose their jobs through the competition of European goods.

Hoffman told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the danger of a flood of foreign imports had been "greatly exaggerated." He argued strongly for buying more European goods, and estimated that with the utmost effort Europe could sell competitive goods here amounting to less than 1 percent of the total American output.

Still, he conceded, some "one-industry towns" might feel the pinch of competition, and some workers might lose their jobs. To help them, he suggested:

1. Extending the time within which such workers could draw Federal or State unemployment insurance; and

2. Setting of workers' training centers, perhaps with some Government help, to fit the workers for different jobs. He also thought some management training centers might be set up in the same way.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) suggested that the most effective way to ease the British dollar shortage, and to save hundreds of millions of dollars for American taxpayers, was to import more oil from British companies.

This was his answer to the bitter protests of American oil companies against British restrictions, and his answer, too, to the efforts of oil-producing States to shut off all imports of foreign oil.

Lodge agreed that the United States had to buy more European goods, but he argued that "the burden of these imports" had to be spread fairly over all American industries. He felt foreign oil should compete with the American product as well as foreign textiles, shoes, glassware and other industrial goods.

He said Britain was already spending 600 million dollars a year for oil imports, financed largely with Marshall Plan funds, and he charged that this was a direct subsidy of the American oil industry.

Hoffman explained that the British had to spend dollars to import oil from British-owned as well as from American companies. He said British companies in the Caribbean and the Middle East had to spend dollars for equipment and on royalties, and he estimated that the British would save only about 10 percent of their present dollar outlay if they got all their oil from British-owned companies.

Hoffman thought the United States should take more imports "whether of shoes, textiles or petroleum," provided the price was right. And Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), from an oil-producing State, said Hoffman's position was "wise and sound."

Republican as well as Democratic member praised the ECA record of the past two years; Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), a critic of the program in past years, told Hoffman he had done "a splendid job—a better job than I anticipated could be done." It was clear that the third-year request for Marshall Plan funds would not run into serious trouble in the Foreign Relations Committee.

Harriman on House Side

On the other side of the Capitol, Ambassador W. Averell Harriman told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that the Communists had lost their grip on western Europe's labor unions, thanks largely to the Marshall Plan.

Harriman said this had been communism's "most notable setback," and recalled that the Communists had sought to penetrate and control the European unions "at all costs."

"The gains made by the voters and workers of Europe toward the free way of life would have been impossible," he said, "if economic recovery with American aid had not given them new confidence and hope."

43 Americans To Quit Sofia Friday Night

Prague, Feb. 22 (U.P.)—U. S. Minister to Bulgaria Donald R. Heath reported by telephone tonight that the 43 members of the legation and their dependents will leave Sofia Friday night on the Simplon-Orient Express.

Heath said the legation, besides packing, is doing its utmost to get some 60 other Americans out of Bulgaria. Washington announced the break in diplomatic relations between the two countries yesterday.

Heath said he expected most of the legation personnel to go to Rome, but he is not yet sure of his personal plans.

The Bulgarian government, he said, is contesting the citizenship status of about 35 of the Americans in Bulgaria, many of them naturalized Americans of Bulgarian descent who returned to Bulgaria.

The Minister said seven of the eight naturalized citizens he interviewed today expressed a definite desire to return to the United States.

All Prague papers today carried without comment Bulgarian charges against Heath, but none mentioned that the United States had severed diplomatic relations.

Two 17-year-old youths, visiting Washington for the first time as winners of the national Voice of Democracy contest, yesterday disclosed they have decided politics is the career for them.

The disclosure came at a Statler Hotel luncheon when the pair, plus two 17-year-old girls, received $500 checks for winning the annual competition.

Richard L. Chapman of Brookings S. Dak., facing a head table crowded with members of Congress and other figures, said that his visit to Washington, part of the prize, had convinced him a political career was worth looking into.

His cowinner, Robert Shanks of Lebanon, Ind., seconded this, admitting that he had almost decided to shelve previous ambitions in the field of radio and dramatics in favor of public office.

The female winners, Gloria Chomiak of Wilmington, Del., and Anne Pinkney of Trinidad, Colo., were impressed with the august Supreme Court, but indicated no wishes for a place on the bench.

The awards were presented by Edward W. Barrett, newly named Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs. Dr. Earl J. McGrath, United States Commissioner of Education, presided at the program, which was carried over the Mutual network.

More than a million high school students wrote and recorded five-minute scripts on "I Speak for Democracy." The contest is sponsored annually by the National Association of Broadcasters, United States Junior Chamber of Commerce and Radio Manufacturers Association.

Developer Wants RFC Funds For A-Proof Cave in Ozarks

New York, Feb. 22 (U.P.)—The owner of a 26-mile-long cave deep in the foothills of the Missouri Ozarks today asked the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a one-million-dollar loan to develop an underground "Noah's Ark" safe from A-bomb and H-bomb attacks.

Lester Dill, Stanton, Mo., said he wanted to equip his Meramec Caverns—once a hideout for Jesse James—as a bomb hideout for the several thousand people "whose survival would be essential to future civilization."

He suggested that the persons picked to hide away in his cave be scientists such as Einstein, medical experts, chemists, engineers and other specialists and promising young people who would insure a future generation.

He said his cave could be developed into a self-sufficient city with storage space for a two to three-year food supply for thousands of persons.

"This subterranean community could be the nucleus for an entirely new world in the event of global-wide bombing," he said. "The country in the immediate vicinity of the cave is excellent for farming, grazing and the beginning of a new life."

If the RFC doesn't like the idea of an underground Noah's Ark, he said, his cave would make a dandy Capital City, war plant site or atomic refuge.

Paris Doctors And Retailers Stage Strike

Paris, Feb. 22. (U.P.)—Middle-class shopkeepers and professional men shut their offices by the thousand today in a mass protest against high taxes. The nation was experiencing its worst strike menace since 1947.

While Premier Georges Bidault's Cabinet acted to curb Communist sabotage, the shop owners, doctors, lawyers and architects bolted their offices, hung notices on the doors and went home four hours early.

They were protesting what they called a "crushing burden of taxation." The stoppage was organized by the "Economic Front," said to have 10 million members.

The doctors remained available for emergency calls. They only closed down their surgeries and did not take part in clinical work during the four-hour stoppage period.

Lawyers who participated did not argue cases in court.

In some areas of Paris and the suburbs 75 percent of the retail shops were shut down.

With strikes threatening to spread to a variety of enterprises, about 50,000 automobile and metal workers already were idle, including 30,000 at the big nationalized Renault works in the Paris suburbs.

German Ex-Officers Group Probed

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 22 (AP).—U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy said today Allied agents are investigating a secret organization of former German army officers which might conceivably form the nucleus of a new German general staff.

The organization is called "Die Bruederschaft" (the brotherhood.)

McCloy said the movement has been organized apparently by small groups of former German army officers. He said there is no indication that it is a large well-integrated organization.

"We are keeping a close watch on this group," McCloy said in an interview.

Allied officials said small groups of former German army men are meeting regularly in all parts of Western Germany.

American and British officials were said to be mapping a common policy to forestall creation of any secret German general staff.

Must Win 1st Battle, Symington Warns

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 22 (AP).—Air Secretary Symington today said the United States cannot afford to "lose the first battle" in an atomic war.

He told a Yale University alumni meeting here that a surprise atomic assault might inflict a "mortal wound from which no nation could completely recover."

Symington urged those who "clamor" for a balanced budget to realize that Russia has built a war machine since 1945 that "overshadows the combined programs of all the Atlantic Pact nations put together."

He said the Russian army is larger than the combined ground forces of the United States and her allies; that her submarine force is "several times larger" than the fleet with which Hitler started World War II.

He said Russia has the world's largest air force in nearly all categories and that it is "growing relatively larger month by month."

He asked why Russia is increasing its strategic bombing force when it did not possess one in the last war and does not need one to "conquer Eurasia."

He answered his question by stating that Russian policy is based upon Stalin's assumption that "terrible clashes . . . will be inevitable" between the Soviet republic and anti-Communist states.

Symington said that in atomic warfare it would not be sufficient for American defenses to knock down one fourth or even one half of a surprise raiding force.

"Where will our cities be when the other 50 percent get through?" he asked.

Symington said that real security can be assured only by the elimination of war itself.

"If all our efforts to prevent war fail," he said, "the United States must win."

He said the Defense Department recognizes the need for the United States to live within its means while preparing for "modern total war."

But he urged critics of defense policies to realize that Russian military strength "meanwhile grows relatively greater" than that of the United States despite the large American expenditures for security.

vient to the Kremlin; he is still a dictator of a police state.

Yet regardless of the character of his regime, America's interest is to widen his breach with the Kremlin, which has already done more damage to Soviet power than any event since the war. As part of widening that breach, the United States will continue to help him with loans and, if necessary, with arms to resist aggression.

What the Indo-China affair does not prove, informed sources here say, is that Tito is seeking a reconciliation with Moscow. He knows already that he cannot get back into the Moscow fold, for Moscow has shown no sign of wanting a reconciliation.

As for Ho Chi-minh he may turn out to be another Tito, bold enough to defy Moscow, but officials here are not pinning any such hopes on him at this time.

Navy Officer Terms Disks Space Ships

New York, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—A Navy commander said today he is convinced flying saucers are space ships piloted by strangers from other planets.

Comdr. Robert B. McLaughlin, guided missiles expert and current skipper of the destroyer Bristol, told of two saucers, 20 inches in diameter, outrunning a Navy rocket.

In an article in the March issue of True magazine, the commander, identified as an Annapolis graduate and head of the Navy unit working on classified projects at White Sands Proving Grounds, N. Mex., said he is convinced "these disks are space ships from another planet, operated by animate, intelligent beings."

In April, 1949, he said, observers at White Sands sent a weather balloon aloft and, while plotting its course found themselves tracking a saucer.

Computations showed the saucer was discus-shaped, 105 feet in diameter, flying at an altitude of 56 miles at a speed of five miles per second, the commander said.

Crommelin Defies Navy 'Gag' Following Criticism Barrage

San Francisco, Feb. 22 (AP).—Capt. John G. Crommelin, jr., outspoken critic of the armed service unification, today said the Navy had ordered him to pipe down.

Crommelin said the order came from Admiral Forrest Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, in a communication to Vice Admiral George D. Murray, Crommelin's superior at his station here.

The order stated:

"Direct Capt. John G. Crommelin to refrain from public statements, and from statements which may be published, which are critical of the organization or officials of the Department of Defense or are critical of any officer or group of officers."

Admiral Murray confirmed that he had received the Crommelin directive and had passed it down to the captain for compliance.

Crommelin indicated he would not comply with the order.

After receiving the word from Washington today, Crommelin told newsmen "I have scheduled 15 invitations to discuss our national security before groups of patriotic Americans during this month and next.

"Unless specifically ordered by my superiors, I intend to keep each appointment."

Crommelin added in a prepared statement: "I would be disloyal to my country and a betrayer of the trust which so many Americans defended during the past war, and to the memory of my two brothers and the many thousands like them who did not return, if I were to keep silent on a subject which affects the security of every American."

He was on the Navy staff in Washington, D. C., when the unification squabble broke into an uproar, and he was in the vanguard of unification opponents.

and employment files and records of all Government employes in the Department of State and such other agencies against whom charges have been heard."

Debate made it clear that this directive included files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation as well as the State Department, although the debate showed the committee was not ordered to ask for the names of FBI informants.

In the course of the debate McCarthy made it clear that while he would turn over all of his information and any documents in his possession to the committee, he would not give the committee the names of his informants within the State Department.

McCarthy said the State Department had been trying to find out for days what the source of his information was and that if they learned, the jobs of his informants would not be worth a "tinker's dam."

Lucas cracked that the Senate then found itself in the position of demanding the FBI open its files by holding that "the McCarthy files are sacred."

Senator William Knowland (R., Calif.) defended McCarthy's position as being analagous to that of a newspaperman who refuses to disclose the source of his information.

Lucas also accepted an amendment first sponsored by Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) providing that if a probable case of disloyalty is found against any individual he shall be given the right to defend himself in public hearings.

project two years ago he hoped to complete it the middle of March, J. Paul Hauck, the firm's Washington representative, said yesterday.

He praised the "consistently fine cooperation" of the District Highway Department and emphasized the "understandable concern" of Connecticut ave. merchants over progress of the underpass.

Hauck mentioned these unexpected complications that have upset the company's original completion timetable: prolonged carpenters and sand and gravel strikes, bad weather, delayed steel shipments and the recent eight-week "dead period" when the laying of streetcar tracks through the tunnel suspended other construction work.

"We have done everything possible to speed this job, even to the point of working men overtime when feasible," he sa'd.

Excavation of the tunnel north of the circle has been completed, with work south of the intersection expected to start today. Lining the tunnel with ceramic tiling will be the next and final phase of McShain's work, Hauck said.

He, too, expressed hope his firm would finish on April 7, but conceded a spell of rainy or frigid weather could set them back to an April 21 completion date.

Hedgcock said he expected the District would grant the construction company an extension of time, if and when, they apply for one.

the Attorney General or to anyone else," Fay said. "And no decision has been reached at this time as to whether the report will ever leave this office."

No attempt was made to prove or disprove the allegations of corruption or to establish the reliability of the complaints. The question of police department administration was considered to be beyond the scope of the gambling probe.

The special grand jury concluded its 18-month investigation of what Fay has described as "Washington's 100-million-dollar-a-year gambling industry" last November. A general report, written by the grand jurors in November, was released in District Court February 13. That report described gambling as a "threat to the community" and contained recommendations for corrective legislation.

The allegations of police corruption are contained in a separate document, distinct from the official report of the special gambling grand jury. The document was compiled by Fay's assistants.

The allegations, reportedly, was made by witnesses who testified before the grand jury, by investigators in Fay's office, by criminals in jail at the time, and by others.

Policemen are known to have testified of corruption by their fellow officers. One policeman admitted freely that he had taken a bribe from a well-known local gambler, who was identified.

'Quick and Easy Solutions' of World Crisis Are Only a 'Vain Hope,' Truman Declares

munism does not lie in its false promises. It lies in the fact that it is an instrument of an armed imperialism which seeks to extend its influence by force."

He described communism as "a modern tyranny far worse than that of any ancient empire."

Communist aggression, Mr. Truman said, had raised the fundamental issue of whether men are to be free to choose their own way of life, or whether they must live under a system imposed upon them by force. He continued:

"Just as our 13 original States found that survival and progress depended on closer association and common effort, so the free nations of the world today must seek their salvation in unity and concerted action.

"The real strength of the free nations is not to be found in any single country or any one weapon, but in the combined moral and material strength of the free world as a whole."

Steps to Aid Our Side

The President recited the steps this country had taken to bring about such strength through the United Nations, the North Atlantic Treaty and the Mutual Defense Assistance program.

"We shall continue to work with other free nations associated with us in the common defense," Mr. Truman said, "for our defense is theirs. The united defense of these nations is a powerful deterrent to aggression, and it will become more powerful as time passes on."

Granting that freedom and democracy can grow only by persuasion, he said:

"At the same time, freedom cannot grow and expand unless it is protected against the armed imperialism of those who would destroy it. The free nations, therefore, must maintain military force as a defense measure."

Search for Peaceful Means

But while the free nations stand prepared to resist aggression, he said, they are doing their utmost to find peaceful means of settling international disputes.

"They know," he said, "that another great war could destroy victor and vanquished alike."

"Consequently, we in the United States are doing and will continue to do all that lies within our power to prevent the horror of another war. We are working for the reduction of armaments and the control of weapons of mass destruction.

"We are convinced of the necessity for an international agreement to limit the use of atomic energy to peaceful purposes, and for a workable international system to assure that such an agreement is effectively carried out.

"We believe that the United Nations is the proper forum in which to reach such an agreement. We firmly believe that all nations would gain by such an international agreement."

At this point, he reminded his audience that the outcome was not ours alone to determine—that the actions of men in other countries will help shape the ultimate decision.

"We believe," he continued, "that that plan for controlling atomic energy which has been worked out in the United Nations and has been approved by the overwhelming majority of its members, would be effective. That plan, therefore, has our support.

"The stakes are too large to let us, or any nation, stand on pride of authorship. We ask only for a plan that provides an effective, workable system—anything less would be a sham agreement. Anything less would incease, not decrease, the dangers of the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes. We shall continue to examine every avenue, every possibility of reaching real agreement for effective control."

Growth of Freedom Needed

But in the long run, Mr. Truman said, the world's hopes for peace lie not in control of weapons, but in the growth and expansion of freedom and self-government.

In many countries of the world, he said, the concepts of freedom and self-government are merely vague phrases. He continued:

"On the continent of Asia and the islands of the Far East, in Africa and in the Near East, are millions of people who live in poverty and who have never known real freedom or democratic government. In their present condition, the immediate benefit of steel plowshares, or smallpox vaccinations, has more appeal than abstract ideas of democracy.

"The Communists are saying they will bring food and clothing and health and a more secure life to these poverty-stricken peoples. We know that is not true. But it is not enough to tell such people that communism is a modern tyranny far worse than that of any ancient empire.

Little Basis for Judging

"It is not enough to tell that communism leads only to oppression. People who have never known freedom and security themselves have little basis for judging how false are the claims of communism. These people will turn to democracy only if it seems to be the best way to meet their urgent needs . . ."

Mr. Truman said that this was why he had asked Congress to act on Point Four legislation providing for technical assistance to backward countries. He said it was also why he had encouraged American investment in such countries.

Turning to the Marshall Plan, he praised the results achieved under it in Europe and called for its completion. It was, he said, "essential to our hopes for peace."

The President told how the reciprocal trade agreements were helping to reduce trade barriers, but he said that more than this was needed. He said this why he had urged Congress to act favorably on the creation of the International Trade Organization, through which the nations of the world can work effectively to increase world trade.

Practical Forward Move

"This program and our other plans for international action," Mr. Truman said, "are the practical way to move forward toward peace. They recognize that we must deal with the difficult world situation which actually exists.

"We must not be discouraged by difficulties and set-backs. We must not be misled by the vain hope of finding quick and easy solutions. We must move forward persistently and courageously along the hard path to a peace based on freedom and justice.

"The progress we have made in this country since the days of George Washington is proof of the vitality and truth of the ideals he fought for. We must be no less firm, no less resolute, no less steadfast than he was . . ."

Mr. Truman, who is past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri, wore a Masonic apron as he entered the hall of the towering George Washington Masonic National Memorial in Alexandria. Along with other high-ranking Masons, he helped unveil the heroic statue of Washington, and then formally presented it in the name of the Order of De Molay.

dedication ceremony and introsons in Virginia, presided at the duced President Truman.

Greetings were spoken by Godfrey P. Runaldue, worshipful master of the Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22; Earl E. Dusenbery, general grand high priest, General Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; John H. Cowles, past grand master of Kentucky and sovereign grand commander of the Supreme Council, Ancient and Accepted Sottish Rite, Southern Masonic Jurisdiction; Melvin M. Johnson, past grand master of Massachusetts and sovereign grand commander, Supreme Council, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, Northern Masonic Jurisdiction; William R. McKay, grand master of the Grand Council, Order of DeMolay, and Elmer R. Arn, past grand master of Ohio and president of the George Washington Masonic National Memorial Association. He was reelected to president at a business session after the dedication.

Bryant Baker, the sculptor who executed the tremendous statue, told of the thrill that had come to him to see it installed.

market for several years, has been listed for at least $400,000.

The house is said to have cost $100,000 when it was built by Philip Barton Key, uncle of the author of "The Star Spangled Banner."

When Stimson purchased Woodley in 1929, when serving as Secretary of State, it was reported then to have cost him a million dollars, but according to later information the cost was about $850,000.

When Stimson it is said, failed in an effort to give Woodley to the Federal Government as a permanent home for Secretary of State, he gave it to Phillips Academy, of which he was an alumnus, and for many years president of the board of trustees.

Since the estate came into the possession of Phillips Academy, efforts were made to interest the Federal Government in purchasing it for a permanent home for the Vice Presidents of the United States, and it was gossiped that some Republicans would have been sympathetic to the project if the party had succeeded in electing its presidential ticket.

John Kemper, headmaster of Phillips Academy, told The Washington Post by telephone from Andover, Mass., yesterday that the school long has wanted "to sell it, since it serves no purpose and has been expensive to maintain."

Kemper said the purchase money probably would go into the academy's general endowment fund.

Kemper also said that the Children's Museum of Washington had been interested in acquiring Woodley. This was confirmed by Bord, who said, "the Children's Museum wanted an option but this was in the mill."

The 17¾-acre estate, where on a window of the manor house Francis Scott Key is said to have scratched his initials, is the largest single piece of acreage left in the city, according to Bord.

The property is zoned for homes only, and Bord said definite plans have been made for its use.

It was learned, however, that the Maret School, founded in 1911, is ready to swap its present plant and site on Kalorama rd. and an 8½-acre tract across Rock Creek Park from the school for the house, and about 8 acres of the Woodley estate. Figuring in this transfer is the Sandoz real estate firm.

This was confirmed by John Laskey, chairman of the executive committee and treasurer for the school, who said the exchange was contingent on the success of an application already filed for a zoning readjustment.

Rezoning Question

Laskey said that if the rezoning application was not successful, the Woodley estate probably would be subdivided into lots, and the house torn down.

Laskey said the school wished to preserve the present architectural features of the manor house, and believed that the changes required by fire and safety regulations could be made without disturbing the appearance of the front of the house or its symmetry.

School Plans Told

The Maret School has about 165 day pupils, from kindergarten through high school, and Laskey said that the kindergarten and first grade would likely be housed in the lodge, and no additional buildings were envisaged.

Playing areas, he said, would be located south and east, to the rear of the manor house.

Woodley was an addition to the tract known as the Rock of Dumbarton, patented in 1703.

The house on the knoll served as the summer White House for four Presidents—Tyler, Van Buren, Buchanan and Cleveland. During President Roosevelt's Administration Col. E. M. House lived there for awhile.

Higher Phone Rates

Few Washingtonians have any independent way of determining whether the 9 percent average rate increase just granted the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. is proper. The raise will make no one happy; the phone subscriber who must pay more at a time when many other costs are inching down will grumble and the telephone company already has protested that the increase is not enough. About all the public can do is to rely on the considered judgment of the Public Utilities Commission that the 6 percent return which the boost will give is fair.

Chesapeake & Potomac presented a strong case for the 13.9 percent increase it requested. Earnings on original investment have been falling off progressively; for the six months ending September 30, the return was 4.26 percent. At the same time, the additions to plant required for each new telephone are double what they were before the war. And there is little indication that operating costs will decline.

What the PUC has done is to take a sympathetic view of C&P's position, but to reject the argument that because the local company is a wholly owned subsidiary of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. the problems are identical. A spokesman for the parent Bell System contended that a 7 percent return was necessary for AT&T to attract adequate capital, and he implied that the same return was necessary for C&P. The Public Utilities Commission, however, took account of the fact that, unlike the local company, certain AT&T subsidiaries issue their own stocks and bonds to the public, and no portion of this money can be considered as available to C&P.

Hence the PUC based its finding on the present cost of capital invested in Chesapeake & Potomac by AT&T. It concluded that the cost of debt capital is 2.826 percent and that a fair return on equity capital is 8 percent. With a 42 percent debt-equity ratio for the local company, the PUC determined that a 6 percent over-all return was reasonable. The figuring in this determination is highly complex, but the sum is that the PUC has protected the interest of Washingtonians by insisting that if Chesapeake & Potomac is to be regarded as an autonomous unit for operating purposes, its rate structure and financial needs also must be treated independently.

The rate increase does not take account, of course, of any added operating costs which may result from present labor negotiations. Unlike other businesses, however, utilities must show hurt before they can cry for recourse. The only way a public utilities commission can operate is to base findings on actual rather than anticipated costs.

British Election

More than 30 million voters will go to the polls in Britain today to decide the constitution of their next Parliament and government. The experts say that never was the outlook for an election more puzzling. London headlines report a "neck and neck election," with the polls showing a slight edge for Labor but a pickup for the Conservatives, as if a swing has set in for Mr. Churchill's party. Such a development is further indicated by the wild and whirring words that the Laborites have thrown into the eleventh hour campaigning. They have been trying to combat whatever popular appeal resides in Mr. Churchill's repeated call for a conference with Moscow. The correspondents seem to agree that this has become a real issue.

One of the most remarkable achievements of the Labor government is that between elections it retained all seats held by Labor where vacancies had occurred. However, it won these contests by reduced majorities, and this loss of strength has been used by the statisticians to prove that the race will be close. It takes only a small change, in any case, to overturn a parliamentary majority. For instance, a swing of 12 percent in 1945 changed a Tory majority of over 200 to a Labor majority of almost 200, and the London Economist estimates that if the Conservatives today can take away from Labor 6 percent net of the Labor vote of 1945, they will gain a slight majority.

It is cause for satisfaction that so little bias has been expressed in print in this country over the pending choice in Britain. Officialdom has been scrupulously neutral. Still in the memory of both countries, undoubtedly, are the Zinoviev and the Sackville-West incidents, the one in the course of a British election and the other in the course of an American election. It is not so much the outcome as the election itself that interests the American Capital. For till this contest between the parties is decided one way or the other, a real concerted grapple with the problem of demobilizing trade and currency barriers cannot be undertaken. This is the issue in the British closet, and neither party has even indicated its presence there, let alone discussed it.

Forward With ECA

What is meant by integration of Europe was again clarified by Paul Hoffman in his appearance before a joint session of two congressional committees devoted to foreign affairs. Nobody has hitherto been more specific. Yet the question is often raised in Europe as to what Mr. Hoffman has exactly in mind. The fact is that integration used to be spelled federation or union in Europe by lip-service politicians of every party and of every country in Europe. Congress did not go so far as that, but respelled it unification in the act governing ECA. Mr. Hoffman himself fell back on the milder word integration when the State Department, sensitive to European susceptibilities, objected to the word unification. Yesterday he refused to depart from his frame of reference. What he means as a starter to integration he again laid on the line. Abolition of quotas, end of dual pricing, and a clearing union. He now reports frankly to Congress, as he has in sundry speeches, that in respect of all three items he is disappointed with results, though not discouraged.

Secretary Acheson, who also gave testimony, is not so blunt as Mr. Hoffman in pressing the case for integration. But he did emphasize one step as "particularly important at the present time," viz, a clearing union. This would facilitate payments among the European nations on current transactions, and be a first hesitant step to convertibility of currencies. When Mr. Hoffman started to push for some system of insuring payments, intra-European trade was going down. It looks, indeed, as if it will decline to zero (except for barter deals) if nothing is done on transferability. Such a system, being limited to exports and imports within Europe, would do little to close the so-called dollar gap, but it would prevent the Europeans from sliding into an economic nationalism beyond recall.

How set nations can get in their ways of doing things is illustrated in Secretary Acheson's statement. "It is hard," he says, "to make adjustments—people tend to resist change and to stick to old ways of doing things." Well, the old way of doing things in trading Europe is certainly not the present autarchic way. Far from it. That is the new way—a way as new as Hitler and Schacht, and was regarded by them and the rest of the world as economic warfare. This it still is—the most provocative of warmongers. The old way was the way of the interchangeability of currencies. This is the goal, one which Mr. Hoffman's half-way house would lead to. However, American leadership calls for reorientation here, as well as in Europe. Adjustments in tariff policy need to be made in America in accord with the immense creditor position we enjoy, and Mr. Acheson indicated that constructive thinking is going on in the Administration with a view to suggesting to Congress the kind of adjustments that would contribute to the general progress.

The Kutcher Case

Some very grave defects of the loyalty program are revealed in the civil suit filed here in the Federal District Court in behalf of James Kutcher. The suit challenges the loyalty program as unconstitutional and contrary to proper judicial procedure. In addition, it attacks the constitutionality of Section 9-A of the Hatch Act forbidding Federal employes "to have membership in any political party or organization which advocates the overthrow of our constitutional form of Government in the United States."

Mr. Kutcher, a Purple Heart veteran who lost both legs at the Battle of San Pietro in Italy in 1943, was dismissed on loyalty charges from his job as a clerk in the Newark office of the Veterans' Administration in 1948. The finding of disloyalty with respect to Mr. Kutcher was based on his admitted membership in the Socialist Workers Party, an organization designated "subversive" by the Attorney General. The Socialist Workers Party is an anti-Stalin splinter group reflecting the Trotskyist deviation from what is now orthodox communism. It is a legal political party, polled about 13,000 votes in the 1948 national election and advocates production for use, socialization of all industry and creation of a workers' and farmers' government. It resolutely denies that it seeks to achieve these ends by violence or any other unconstitutional means.

Yet the Attorney General put the party on his blacklist without publishing his reasons and without granting it a hearing. Moreover, he held the party to be an organization within the purview of Section 9-A of the Hatch Act and membership in it to entail, therefore, mandatory removal from the Government. Thus Mr. Kutcher is the victim of a dual arbitrariness. The organization to which he belongs has been arbitrarily held to advocate what it denies advocating. And the advocacy imputed to the organization has been arbitrarily imputed to Mr. Kutcher through the mere fact of his membership—an assumption of guilt by association which the Supreme Court in the Schneiderman case denounced as invalid and repugnant to American law. As a result, Mr. Kutcher has been severely punished not only by the loss of his job and a blacklisting that may close all other avenues of employment to him but also by an official finding that he is "disloyal" to the country in whose service he was grievously wounded.

One cannot help wondering, anyway, why the United States goes to so much trouble to punish James Kutcher. The loyalty program is supposed to protect the national security. But the national security needs no protection from a legless file clerk working in the Newark branch office of the Veterans' Administration. The punishment of Mr. Kutcher serves no national interest. It serves no interest save vindictiveness. And Mr. Kutcher is made a target of this vindictiveness solely because he entertains certain unorthodox and unpopular political opinions.

It would be worth while, quite apart from constitutional and legal questions, to reckon the cost of a loyalty program that can produce such results. Among these costs are the vesting of absolute discretion in a single political appointee, the Attorney General, to proscribe voluntary associations of American citizens; the stigmatization of individuals as disloyal by a star-chamber administrative tribunal ignoring the elements of due process of law; the restriction of the right of advocacy guaranteed by the First Amendment, at least as far as Government employes are concerned. Is the security of the United States really safeguarded by the sacrifice of such cherished safeguards of individual liberty?

A Workable System

The strong can be flexible as well as adamant. There was a heartening recognition of this fact in the restatement of American policy on international control of atomic energy given by the President in his address on Washington's Birthday at Alexandria. We continue to adhere, he made plain, to the control plan worked out in the United Nations and approved by a majority of its members. That plan has our support, Mr. Truman declared, "not because of its form or its words but because we believe it would achieve effective control."

The President went on, however, as he has not done before, to say this: "The stakes are too large to let us, or any nation, stand on pride of authorship. We ask only for a plan that provides an effective, workable system—anything less would be a sham agreement. Anything less would increase, not decrease, the dangers of the use of atomic energy for destructive purposes. We shall continue to examine every avenue, every possibility of reaching real agreement for effective control."

This puts the problem in a fresh perspective. It constitutes in no sense an abandonment of principle. Nevertheless it contributes significantly to mitigating the brusqueness and rigidity that seem of late to have characterized the American attitude. It supports and supplements what Assistant Secretary of State Hickerson, the American member of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, said a week or so ago. If the Russians can offer an atomic control system as effective as the American plan, he asserted, we are prepared to examine it.

But a plan may provide for a measure of effective control without being as effective as the American plan and still amount to much more than a sham agreement. An agreement with appropriate safeguards might diminish the danger of atomic war without eliminating that danger altogether. By making the standard "an effective, workable system" instead of a system as comprehensive and effective as the American plan, the President seems to have opened the door at least a crack to new and still realistic approaches to the problem. In doing so, he has strengthened this country's diplomatic position toward a "real agreement" for an effective measure of control.

Word From Hitler

In the circumstances the Administration cannot wonder that the agitation for a face-to-face talk with Stalin "on the highest level" (as the wartime vernacular had it) is gaining ground. It is not that Americans are appeasement-minded. Nor can the agitation be ascribed to any lack of thought on the consequences of failure. It seems to us that the agitation has thriven on the disquiet produced by the curt, speculation-ending announcement on the H-bomb and the statement that the H-bomb altered nothing. Both together seemed to put the accent on containment by military strength and contentment with existing policy. Even that believer in physical force, Adolf Hitler, realized that this in itself was only one element either in security for peace or in victory in war. In Mein Kampf he wrote:

> Conceptions and ideas, as well as movements with a definite spiritual foundation, whether this foundation be false or true, can, when they have reached a certain point of maturity, only be broken by the exercise of technical power if these material weapons are at the same time themselves the carriers of a new inflammatory thought, of an idea, or of a universal philosophy.

What was needed along with the H-bomb announcement was not a fresh try to come to terms with Stalin, but a fresh exposition of the American position in concrete terms, and a reactivation of moral as well as material rearmament. Moral rearmament is lapsing for the breath of life that would come from leadership. It resides in the nonmilitary meaning of the Atlantic Alliance. It is all very well to say, as Premier St. Laurent said the other day in New York, that "The treaty itself asserts that the North Atlantic community is not just a military alliance; the North Atlantic nations have undertaken to combine their economic, social and moral strength as well as their military resources," but what is the follow-up evidence of any such combination? That is the kind of question that people, it seems to us, are asking in the wake of the H-bomb, and the passivity toward it accounts for an agitation which, as the State Department rightly thinks, is dangerous in its implications.

Front Lines In Job Battle

By Malvina Lindsay

First Casualties

THE COLD gray digits of unemployment statistics begin to take on more human meaning for those in the vulnerable front lines of the job battle. Youth hears warnings of a tough summer for job hunters. Working wives hear a disturbing reminder of the 1930's echoing from a congressional hearing. Older workers and minority groups already feel the pressure.

Columbia University's placement bureau warns that graduates will find competition for employment "severe"—especially if they are lawyers or engineers. Women students will find doors more tightly closed in most fields.

Congressional "thunder on the left" for working wives reverberated recently from an Appropriations Subcommittee hearing when Miss Frieda S. Miller, chief of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, presented her financial request. With 18 million women in the labor force, with more married than single women now employed, with the steady march of women into the working world, this outcropping of the old argument against working wives held its portents.

Missing this time was the charge that most married women work to buy fur coats. For fur dealers have been dinning in the ear of Congress that they are broke because of excise taxes. But brought out of moth balls were the other stock charges—that women today don't like housework . . . that working wives are causing the breakup of the home . . . that many wives work who don't need the money . . . that women are taking jobs from men and becoming the major wage-earners of the country . . . that women should choose between home and factory.

IF UNEMPLOYMENT gets worse, more will be heard along this line, even though most employed wives are working because of low family income, and because an industrial society has moved woman's labor from farm to city, from kitchen to factory. (As feminists have long asked apropos of working women, "When haven't women worked?")

Since women today tend to drop out of the labor force when their children are small, the working wife is often a middle-aged or older woman. When her employment is hit, she finds the going hard in her job seeking, both because of age and lack of versatility.

All these storm warnings however needn't hold a panic for young, middle-aged or old. But they suggest more preparedness against a tightening market.

Youth will need to use its head more than its fancy in choosing and seeking jobs. It will need, with aid of parents and teachers, to look ahead, plan, discover its aptitudes and consider how they will fit into the economy. It will need to develop resourcefulness in meeting the needs of a changing society.

Many fields still are short of workers. The cry for teachers, especially elementary ones, continues, as 1953-54 approaches when the schools expect their peak enrollment. Nurses and social workers still are in short supply. College placement bureaus report a demand for salesmen to counter "overproduction." Other opportunities exist, but youth will have to hunt for them, even create them.

THE MATURE or older worker who becomes a front line casualty in unemployment often needs retraining. Shifts in the textile industry recently have displaced many middle-aged and older women who need to work. But shifts are taking place in other fields as well—on the farm, in domestic service, in social life. Some industries are declining, others coming up. Wider adult education, especially in vocational skills, would help many men and women who have to start new economic lives.

There is strong feeling developing through the country that the Nation's great resource of women who have reared their families and have time on their hands should be more constructively used. A step toward doing this will be taken in a workshop to be held at Vassar College Summer Institute. In this, 60 women whose families are reared will be given a chance to develop new skills and new interests with special emphasis on community service.

This is designed primarily for the woman not seeking a job, but rather a more satisfying and creative life that will benefit society. Yet a study in connection with it to be financed by the Woman's Foundation may blaze a trail for more general reeducation of mature persons, both women and men.

Electoral Reform

The political insights of the liberal leaders whom you report as opposing electoral college reforms certainly come from wide experience and ought to be valid. However, it is possible they are not justified even on the basis of political realism.

It is argued that if the State unit were divided in the electoral college, it would seriously limit the power of pivotal groups in pivotal States. That is certainly true, but the reforms would also give minority groups in the Southern States an opportunity to add their votes to those of their political brothers in other sections of the country. No party would long be able to ignore that formidable bloc of votes for the sake of courting Southern conservatives.

It is time the ADA, CIO-PAC, NAACP, and liberals generally awakened to the fact that Southern liberalism is no longer an infant unweaned from its Northern parents. It is beginning to throw a good deal of weight around at the State and local levels on its own account.

The political leaders of the South well know that on the State and local levels Dixie is no longer "solid." The South is in ferment and if liberals of the South knew that their vote would count in presidential elections, they could intensify their efforts and increase their strength considerably.

But there is a principle also to be considered. An election which reflects the popular vote is more democratic than one delivered in State units. Liberals, committed as they ought to be to human rights, cannot lightly compromise that principle for the uncertain rewards of expediency. A reform in our method of electing Presidents is long overdue. If the liberal groups to which we have looked for leadership in political reform now commit themselves to the tactics of the reactionaries in fear for their own power, then others will take their place as the prophets of freedom and liberty.

DP Danger

It has become smart and fashionable for cartoonists to lampoon American citizens who are opposed to the admission of displaced parasites as illiberal and bigoted, and for editors to denounce them as un-American. The fact is that these Americans are putting the interests of the U. S. A. first, whereas the advocates of relaxed immigration laws are putting first the interest of the DPs.

In one recent issue of a metropolitan daily there were: an editorial advocating admission of more DPs, a story of the water shortage in New York (and impending shortages in other regions, including Maryland,) and a story of increasing unemployment in this country. These three items are closely related, and all point to the inability of this country in coming centuries to support its population. More recently, Washington papers carried the story of the failure of the DP program in Maryland, because of the unwillingnes of the DPs to remain on the farms.

The issue is simple. Our population, with further immigration, is increasing rapidly; our resources are being exhausted rapidly. Water is only one example but perhaps the most important. Our national unity is being further diluted by the admission of racial and religious groups who have no loyalty to the United States. The claim that Communists and undesirables are being screened out is patently absurd. If we cannot keep Communists and spies out of the State and Justice Departments, how can we screen them out of a mob which will swear to anything to gain the haven of the United States? Because Senator McCarran is defending the interests of the United States against the interests of foreigners, he is being abused by the racial and religious pressure groups as if he were a traitor as virulent as Benedict Arnold.

Party Labels

In your issue of February 16 that master-reporter Drew Pearson and brilliant social satirist Malvina Lindsay each write on the same current theme, namely the anomaly of $100 plate dinners for the Democratic Party, avowed champion of labor but now pretty well subsidized by Big Business, and $1 box lunches for the Republicans in their efforts to win back the support of the masses by putting on a proletarian show.

I have been observing the Washington political scene from the sidelines for nearly 40 years, and I am still unable to distinguish a Republican from a Democrat with the naked eye.

Perhaps some day our politically adolescent Nation may mature enough to have its party labels mean something, by designating two fundamentally opposing forces.

Alienating China

I was disturbed by J. Raymond Dyer's February 13 letter "Formosa For The Formosans." He said Formosa is Japanese according to international law. I can not understand how Japan's imperialistic occupation of Formosa can be justified under international law.

Many people say Formosa is not Chinese and call for Formosan independence. I think all the writers have a wrong idea about the term "Chinese." For the "Chinese" are not a pure race, but a combination of those people who live in the territory of China. It is just like the term "American." The difference between Formosans and the mainland Chinese people is no greater than the distinction between Irish and British.

I wish all Americans could avoid such propaganda if they hope to continue in friendship with the Chinese people. I do not believe an independent Formosa can offer stronger resistance than for the Formosans and mainland Chinese to combine forces.

Chinese Communist Titoism can only be encouraged by strengthening the friendly relations between Chinese and Americans and by lending substantial help to those people who hold a friendly attitude.

The United States has neglected such important steps in winning Chinese friends while dreaming of Mao Tze-tung's Titoism. Walter Lippmann has blamed everything on Chiang Kai-shek without reviewing American policy. Certainly Chiang lost China by himself but the United States has made very little effort to win over the Chinese people at the present time.

Using Surplus Potatoes

Lately we have heard much talk of the Government's vast store of surplus potatoes. We have heard of putting blue dye on them so people can't eat them and of feeding them to livestock. We have heard of buying them from farmers at $1.65 a bushel and then selling them back to the same farmers for livestock feed at 1 cent a bushel, all at the expense of the taxpayer.

Now if the politicians of Washington don't think there are any hungry Americans, I invite them to Beaufort County, N. C., where I'll give them a personally conducted tour. I'll let them look hungry children in the face right here in America—they won't have to fly to Europe or to Korea.

These are not "no-count" people either. They were working a year or two ago, and they are now walking up and down the roads looking for work. I know, for they are asking me for work, and when I do give them a job they turn out to be willing and excellent workers. I think they are somewhat more deserving of surplus potatoes than our American cattle.

Give surplus potatoes to school lunch rooms. Let the school lunch rooms have free potatoes so they can spend their pitiful funds for more meat, more eggs, more milk, more carrots and more fresh greens—and so that they can hand out more free meals.

Fat cattle and skinny people don't speak very well for the American way of life.

VERNON WARD.
Ransomville, N. C.

Editor's Note: Under existing laws surplus farm products already are furnished free to school lunch programs. It is reported that all requests from schools for free potatoes have been filled.

Potatoes may be, and already have been, converted into alcohol, the most important and industrial application being solvents. Good Irish whisky is distilled from potatoes. Motor fuel was produced successfully from waste potatoes in 1923, in New Zealand. In Germany, during the past century, the use of potatoes, instead of grain as a source of alcohol for commercial use developed into an important industry.

Nor were there ever surplusage in Germany, either, it seems. They just got busy and found use for the darn stuff. Statistics of 1917 (as far back as that) show that Germany had eight million acres of land devoted to potato culture. Three million tons of the crop were used for the manufacture of 67 million gallons of alcohol. This represented about 80 percent of the total alcoholic production of the country.

It was a prominent feature in the organization of the agriculture of the country. In great measure it was carried on by the cooperation of the farmers who supplied to jointly owned distilleries the potatoes to be converted into alcohol, receiving later the wash and residues rich in nitrogenous matter, which was of inestimable value as cattle food.

Thus was extensive breeding of cattle facilitated, resulting in the heavy production of manure which in turn not only furthered the greater cultivation of potatoes, but other garden and farm foodstuffs.

There is no such thing as surplusage in life-giving and life-sustaining elements. And it is something to look askance at, when an economic gimmick on the statute books makes it compulsory to destroy any single one of these eleemnts.

Excise Tax Need

The public is currently being subjected to strong pressure from the motion picture industry against the 20 percent tax on theater admissions. This is evidenced by the industry's appeal to the public to phone Congressmen in protect against the tax, or to sign petitions in the lobbies of local theaters.

Can it be that neither the public nor the movie industry realizes that this Nation is fighting a cold war? If the American public is too soft to deprive itself of a few precious luxuries and to pay a measly tax on movies (and other unnecessary trinkets such as furs, jewelry, etc.), we may as well call it quits and give in to the Reds right now.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Stalin's Theory Of Coexistence

Last Saturday, which was February 18, the New York Times published in one series four separate dispatches from its correspondent, Mr. Harrison E. Salisbury. The first had been filed in Moscow on Monday, the second on Tuesday, the third on Thursday and the fourth on Friday. They had been held up by the Soviet censorship during the week and then released in one batch. They all dealt with the question of the Soviet attitude today toward Stalin's statement made two years ago that "peaceful settlements of disagreements between the USSR and the USA are not only possible but are also absolutely essential in the interests of general peace."

Lippmann

Mr. Salisbury's dispatches contain much internal evidence that they are not, as we say in the newspaper business, "think pieces," but that he wrote them on an official briefing,—and that they were held up by the censor for a careful examination and then released as a satisfactory report of what the Soviet government wishes the world to believe is its attitude.

TWO BASIC propositions are put forward in the Salisbury dispatches:

One is that Stalin continues to believe that the peaceful coexistence of capitalism and communism is "possible . . . in spite of the differences in the economic system and ideology."

The other proposition is, as the Central Committee of the Communist Party says in an election manifesto, that as long as capitalism survives in the world, the "menace of an imperialist attack on the USSR" will exist.

NEITHER proposition is new. The second is however older than the first, and is fundamental Leninist doctrine—that as long as the two systems exist there will be conflict. The proposition that the two systems might coexist peaceably is a variation in the doctrine which is associated with Stalin. It sprang from his struggle with Trotsky, and he has put it forward repeatedly whenever, in his view, the interests of the Soviet state were served by it.

In Mr. Churchill's memoirs there is a confidential communication, dated November 23, 1941, in which Stalin told Churchill that "the difference of the state organization," namely communism, "should not, and could not hinder us in achieving a successful solution of all the fundamental questions concerning our mutual security and our legitimate interests."

DO THE two propositions contradict one another? Not, I think, in Stalin's mind. He remains an orthodox Leninist in his belief that the two systems will always menace one another as long as they both exist, and that therefore they cannot be harmonized in a true and lasting peace. But his theory is that it is "possible"—not certain but possible—and that it is now—not forever but now—"absolutely essential" that they should find a way to "coexist" without war.

In this limited sense the two propositions are reconcilable in the orthodox Communist doctrine: the two systems can coexist but they will continue to menace one another. It was on this possibility of coexistence without harmony but without war that Mr. Churchill based his appeal for "a supreme effort . . . so that each can live their life, if not in friendship, at least without the hatreds of the cold war."

THE NON-COMMUNIST world does not have a systematic body of doctrine. But while it would like to believe that the two systems can coexist, it holds that as long as there is a powerful communist state the capitalist and also the social democratic world will be menaced. The fundamental Leninist doctrine of conflict is now also non-communist doctrine, implanted in the non-communist world by the while subversive apparatus and propaganda of the Communist Parties.

Stalin's proposition that the two systems can for a time coexist peaceably is interpreted in the non-communist world as an offer of a settlement without military action but not of a settlement without subversive action. In the non-communist view the two systems could coexist if the conflict between them were limited to propaganda; they cannot coexist peaceably if the propaganda is implemented by internal subversion supported and directed from abroad. In other words, an agreement to coexist is possible with the USSR and its allies; it is not possible with the Third International, the Cominform, or with any other of the manifestations of a revolutionary movement in the service of the USSR.

To achieve a settlement the USSR's fear of "imperialist attack" and the non-communist world's fear of subversive attack would both have to be allayed.

IT IS SAID, and I think with good reason, that Stalin hopes before he dies to validate his theory of coexistence, so that after his death it may become an integral part of the orthodox doctrine and legend. There is much anxiety, I have been told, on the other side of the iron curtain—among the satellites and inside Russia, too—that Stalin may die, having failed to validate the theory of coexistence, and that then his successor will be some one so thoroughly imbued from childhood with pure Leninism that he will be unable to conceive anything but inexorable and inexpiable conflict. Stalin, it is said, realizes this—really dreads a war of extermination—and would like to leave as his testament to the orthodox the doctrine of coexistence.

If that is so, it would go far to explain why the very few Western statesmen who have ever dealt personally with Stalin and on equal terms—notably Mr. Churchill among the living—have never abandoned all hope.

Spreading Confusion

By Marquis Childs

McCarthy's Irresponsible Charges

FORTUNATELY, the American people have good nerves. They seem to be able to stand up under the jumping jitters from which a great many of their elected representatives are suffering.

Childs

During the past few weeks I have been in a dozen communities in various parts of the country. I think people are understandably confused and troubled. But they show a healthy resistance to the recurring waves of sensation and counter-sensation that emanate from men who should know better.

The latest example is Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin. To broadcast vague charges about the State Department without supporting names or facts is merely to feed the atmosphere of suspicion and apprehension. It does not contribute to the security of the United States at home or abroad.

Of the four names mentioned by McCarthy in his Nevada speech, prior to the Senate blast, the only individual still connected with the State Department is John S. Service. Service was cleared by former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes after a false charge had been brought against him and he had been subjected to great humiliation. Both Byrnes and former Undersecretary of State Joseph Grew wrote letters to Service assuring him that there was no basis for the charge.

Reinstated and now assigned as consul to Calcutta, Service is on leave preparatory to going to India. He was requested for the Calcutta post, according to the State Department, by the American Ambassador to India, Loy Henderson. Henderson is one of the most consistently anti-Communist officers in the United States Foreign Service.

THE NAMES to which McCarthy repeatedly refers apparently come from a list of 108 that were originally raised by the Appropriations Committee of the Senate during the Eightieth Congress. Of the total, 44 were still on the State Department payroll. They were subjected, according to the department, to a most thorough loyalty check by the department's investigating system. Then they were also investigated and subsequently cleared by the top loyalty board of which Seth Richardson is chairman.

If the objective is to sabotage American foreign policy, then McCarthy and those who join in this kind of business are succeeding better than they realize. The impression it creates in countries in Europe and Asia that want to work with the United States is almost worse than the impression it creates here.

There was too much carelessness on security, and particularly during the war when this country was allied with the Soviet Union and in the immediate aftermath of the war. One cure is to strengthen present laws. The law on treason should probably be tightened; certainly the statute of limitations removed or greatly extended from the present three years.

ANY AUTHENTIC information about subversive individuals in Government should be given at once to the FBI. J. Edgar Hoover has repeatedly made it clear that to spread such information in the headlines makes the FBI's task doubly difficult.

In times like these there is an extra responsibility on all public officials to avoid the alarmist and the sensational. Yet, exactly the opposite principle seems to prevail.

Representative Walter Judd of Minnesota went out to Oregon to make a Lincoln Day speech. In an interview printed in the Portland Oregonian he said that the Pacific Northwest was judged "expendable" in national defense plans. He said that "they" have made plans to defend the Eastern half of the United States, southeastern Canada and western Europe.

When a reporter pressed him to identify "they," Judd was evasive—he wasn't sure it was President Truman, but it might have been "political elements." With the interview was printed a photograph of Judd smiling merrily as though he had just given the people of the region the happiest news in the world.

The effect of such statements can be imagined, particularly when it is a known fact that Alaskan defenses are so weak as to be almost nonexistent. This is not the way to make America strong. It is the way to spread confusion and panic. If the men in the Kremlin have any sense of humor, which is highly improbable, they must be laughing at such responses to the Soviet challenge.

Senate Unit Adds $17 Million to Bill For Agency Funds

A Senate Appropriations Subcommittee yesterday added $17,893,000 to a House-approved $732,485,500 appropriation—putting in funds for rent control, pest control and reclamation projects.

The money is to supplement appropriations already given various Government agencies for the present fiscal year, ending next June 30. Most of it is for the Veterans Administration.

In addition to cash appropriations, the measure authorizes the Atomic Energy Commission to make an additional $78,885,000 worth of contracts to step up its program.

Among the new items it wrote into the measure were $3,600,000 for the rent control program and $4,500,000 for forest pest control work.

Foes of FEPC Defeat 'Gag;' Battle Bill Through Night

lay, if not prevent, final action on the bill.

They lost their initial battle to keep the legislation from even coming up around nightfall. As the night wore on, they were limited to a series of motions "that the committee do now arise"—one method of adjourning the House. Each motion was thumpingly voted down by the House.

The House dug in for a night of it after bell signals beat a steady tattoo summoning members to the floor on points of no quorum, motions to adjourn and rarely used parliamentary technicalities.

Concede Motions Dilatory

With Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas a valuable ally, Southern members kept the anti-discrimination measure from being called up for more than five hours.

But after seven roll calls even the anti-FEPC Rayburn was forced to tacitly concede the Dixie motions were dilatory.

At 4:43 p. m. with Southern colleagues still shouting for recognition, he ruled that House Labor Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.), FEPC bill manager, had the floor under the usually routine "Calendar Wednesday" call of House committees.

It took another half hour to get the House into "committee—House rule book lingo for actually starting work on a bill.

Shouting points of order, Dixie Democrats protested angrily that Lesinski had never been directed by his committee to bring up the measure. Lesinski hollered that he had, and once again Rayburn sided with Lesinski.

But the Southerners had one more trick to keep the bill suspended in midair. Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), floor manager of the rebel forces, used it—a demand for a vote on "consideration" of the bill. For the eighth time since noon, the roll was called.

Smith lost the count, 287 to 121, and at 5:15 p. m. the House opened general debate on the key civil rights measure. Speaker Rayburn called his friend Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.) to the chair to preside over the "committee."

Cheers went up from liberal-wing Democrats. Representatives Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., (D.-Lib., N. Y.) and Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), rushed over to shake hands with Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.), author of the FEPC bill.

But the Southerners insisted they had merely lost a skirmish. They had scores of "perfecting" amendments to throw at the bill and substitute motions providing they could block limitations on debate.

Galleries filled for the spectacle before noon and hundreds of friends and foes of FEPC formed a queue in the lower House corridors waiting for a seat at the show.

Southern members hardly waited for the chaplain's prayer to launch their delaying action. At 12:03 p. m. Representatives John Rankin (D., Miss.) and John Bell Williams (D., Miss.) vied for the right to make the first point of no quorum.

Williams then demanded the clerk read the House "journal" of previous day's business. With a quorum call intervening, the journal reading consumed a full hour.

Under a previous agreement, Representative John McSweeney (D., Ohio), an FEPC supporter, next read Washington's "Farewell Address," an annual House custom. Reading rapidly, McSweeney completed his stint in 43 minutes flat.

Adjournment Defeated

Georgia's Eugene Cox (Dem.), then moved the House adjourn as a "mark of respect to George Washington." The House refused, 278 to 127, but the roll call consumed 30 minutes.

Almost endlessly, the Dixie motions went on. Florida's Dwight Rodgers moved to dispense with "Calendar Wednesday," passionately contending that for the House to continue in session was a "desecration to the Father of Our Country."

Once, a leading Administration supporter of FEPC, House Majority Leader John W. McCormick (Mass.), was forced to invite another roll call by moving to "dispense with further proceedings under the call."

Had he not done so, the Southeners under a parliamentary technicality, were prepared to require the sergeant-at-arms to bring in every absentee member.

Bill Sets Up Commission

There was a brief commotion in mid-afternoon when Speaker Rayburn discovered a spectator had a camera in the galleries, in violation of House rules. Rayburn dispatched House Doorkeeper William M. (Fishbait) Miller to the galleries. The visitor was permitted to return to the gallery after checking his camera.

The FEPC bill, before the House at long last, sets up a five-member Fair Employment Practices Commission. The commission would be empowered to investigate cases of alleged job discrimination, hold hearings, and issue "cease and desist" orders against offenders. The commission would be empowered to enforce its orders by resort to the courts. Employers of 50 or more workers would be subject to the law.

Hebert Would Forbid Exclusive Interviews

Representative F. Edward Hebert(D., La.) last night playfully moved to bar the President and Administration officials from "discrimination" against any newspaper reporter under the proposed FEPC law.

Referring to Mr. Truman's recent bout with newspapermen over an exclusive interview he had granted to the New York Times' Arthur Krock, Hebert sent to the desk an amendment providing:

"That the granting of exclusive interviews to one individual to the discrimination of another news reporter or radio commentator is hereby prohibited as contrary to fair employment practice principles."

Mississippi Democrat Improved in Hospital

Clarence E. Hood of Meridian, Miss., was reported yesterday by Mrs. Hood to be in good condition at Doctor's Hospital where he is under treatment for a heart ailment. Hood is national committeeman for the pro-Truman Democrats of Mississippi.

He suffered a heart attack last November and entered the hospital last Saturday for treatment of what his physician described as an "extension" of his injury.

House Unit Votes Court Power To 'Purge' Incompetent Judges

By The Associated Press

A House Judiciary Subcommittee yesterday approved a bill to allow the Federal courts to police themselves and "purge" incompetent Federal district judges.

Federal juges now may be removed only by Congress.

Representative Sam Hobbs, (D., Ala.), sponsor of the bill, told the subcommittee that impeachments paralyze the legislative process for weeks at great cost.

He said the present system is not entirely fair because any Congressman can launch impeachment proceedings. Often this is done, Hobbs said, because of complaints by "disgruntled litigators."

Hobbs said there is "lively interest" in the Senate over the bill because of some impending impeachment threats. He refused to elaborate.

His bill would authorize the Supreme Court to appoint three circuit court judges to try Federal district judges charged with improper conduct in office.

Supreme Court members and circuit judges still could be impeached as at present.

Representative Robert L. Ramsay (D., W. Va.) said he favored the bill as protection against " dictatorial Federal judges."

Hobbs said his bill would give the judiciary branch the same right now enjoyed by the executive and legislative branches to remove unworthy men.

CAN BILL LEDERER'S BOOK BECOME A BESTSELLER?
Maybe, but—there isn't a single picture in it. No animals, no babies, no Frenchmen. To enjoy it, you have to know how to read.
Another thing—this is not a helpful book. It will not bring you either peace or maturity. Doctors believe it's healthy to laugh. If so, that's the only practical advantage to reading.
ALL THE SHIPS AT SEA
The book does not even have a message. It does prove that a lot of Navy people are human. But after the Missouri episode there was no doubt of that anyway.
The only reason Bill's book might become a best-seller, we guess, is that it's the most reading fun in months and years. Published today. You'll find it in bookstores . . .

Businessmen Urge Tax on Cooperatives

By The Associated Press

A parade of spokesmen for business and trade associations urged yesterday that Congress end the tax exemptions now given cooperatives and other mutual associations. They estimated the Government would get up to one billion dollars new revenue.

Their arguments were made to the House Ways and Means Committee which is studying ways to balance a possible cut of several hundred million dollars in excise taxes through plugging tax loopholes and increasing some taxes.

Garned M. Lester of Jackson, Miss., president of the National Tax Equality Association, called co-op tax exemptions a form of "subsidized competition."

He said the conditions under which cooperatives originally were exempted have changed and tax-exemption theories now are "outmoded and outdated."

Austin W. Carpenter, Sherburne, N. Y., secretary of the National Associated Businessmen, said cooperatives are doing 17 billion dollars of tax-exempt business a year. He added:

"Tax them fully. Tax the other mutuals like them—the mutual savings banks, the building and loan associations, the other co-op banks, the post exchanges and the others in that class."

Harold O. Smith, executive vice president of the United States Wholesale Grocers Association, said cooperatives engaging in profit-making activities were "getting out of hand."

When they go into the business of processing, wholesaling and retailing foods, he declared, "they go far beyond the original intent of the law, and become processors or merchants exempt from taxes but in direct competition with other tax-paying industries."

Virginia Landlords Say Rents Won't Go Up Much, If at All time," William A. Ziegler, general manager.

Parkfairfax—1681 units—"Nothing I can tell you at this time. The policy would be laid down by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., (owners) in New York City . . . Rents won't go up very much. There is a good deal of housing available and a one or two-bedroom apartment can be obtained without waiting. The rents are somewhat higher than ours," T. C. Campbell, manager.

Buckingham — 1828 units — "No plans for an increase now. We are just reading about the bill in the papers. We have a rent increase request pending now with the Area Rent Director."

Colonial Village—1100 units—Arlington Village—665 units—"We plan to adjust phone service rates upward so they pay our actual costs. That is the only change we plan," Gustave Ring, owner.

Barcroft—1286 units—"No immediate plans for a general increase. Apartment rents will probably be adjusted to bring those who didn't sign voluntary increases up to those who did."

Lee Gardens—592 units—"No immediate plans for an increase. We had a 10 percent one two years ago."

Fillmore Gardens—554 units—"We have no plans for a rent increase. Many tenants paid the voluntary increase previously."

Under 5 Percent

Ring, whose Colonial and Arlington Village developments make him one of the largest operators in nearby Virginia, predicted rents in the area "won't go up 5 percent." He said they would not increase at all on new projects.

The reason is the "volume of new building," which restrains landlords from boosting rents on existing structures too far, he said.

One of the few remaining hopes for Virginia tenants facing rent hikes is the Magruder bill, introduced immediately after the rent control death sentence was passed by the Legislature. Magruder had tried to keep Fairfax County, Alexandria and Falls Church under controls until July 1, 1951, by amending the decontrol act, but this was smothered by a 75-11 vote.

The Magruder bill is cosponsored by Delegates George Damm of Arlington, Armistead L. Boothe of Alexandria and Edwin Lynch of Fairfax. It would permit the Governor to restore rent controls if a city or county governing body requested them or if he found an emergency existed.

Against Decontrol

The Alexandria City Council is on record against the decontrol and so telegraphed State Senator Andrew W. Clarke and Delegate Boothe last week. Yesterday Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim said he supported the Magruder measure since it would give the council a chance to hold public hearings and determine public sentiment on rent control before asking for reinstatement.

In Fairfax County, Arthur I. Shaffer, member of the Board of Supervisors, said he had polled the six-man board and found five of the number opposed to rent controls. He noted, however, that he favored the Magruder bill since it would permit restoration of the controls "if rent gouging takes place."

The Arlington County Board Chairman, Daniel A. Dugan, yesterday wrote a personal letter to President Truman asking him to encourage Congress to adopt a law permitting towns to continue rent controls in States where State governments have lifted them.

In his letter, Dugan said the Virginia decontrol law was passed over the "bitter protest of residents of Arlington."

Against Local Option

He said that if Congress would not pass a local option rent law, as requested, he hoped it would lift rent control in D. C. "in order that citizens on both sides of the Potomac will be treated alike and in order that Congressmen staying in the District who never gave local option authority to the District Commissioners, because of obvious reasons, will know from first hand experience what decontrol will mean to thousands of fixed incomes of Federal employes."

John Edelman, secretary of the CIO housing committee, said the CIO will push for local option legislation this session along the lines Dugan outlined. This move is prompted not only by the Virginia situation but by the experience in other decontrolled areas around the country, he said. The American Federation of Labor may join in such support, he added.

Two Washington area real estate spokesmen predicted substantial rent increases. Charles J. Rush, executive secretary of the Washington Real Estate Board, said tenants could expect "equalization" between the lower-renting old apartments and new higher-rent units. This amounted to 10 to 15 percent, he said.

New Units Higher

Charles J. Bauer, executive secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Washington, predicted a similar adjustment, but said "rents on controlled property will not go up as high as rents charged for new units."

But no matter how much the increase, home builders, who have been complaining lately of a "sluggish" market, are expected to find new customers among present renters.

M. T. Broyhill, head of the firm of M. T. Broyhill & Sons, Inc., 4624 Lee highway, Arlington, reported that on Sunday and Monday his firm sold 150 homes and prospective buyers had six phone lines tied up steadily during office hours. "This was partly caused by rent decontrol, I'm sure," Broyhill said.

"The man who pays $60 a month in an apartment can't buy a home that cheap. But when the rent goes up to $80 a month, he begins thinking of buying," Broyhill declared.

Advantages Cited

Another large Arlington developer, M. A. Mace of 5700 North Washington blvd., said a middle-income family "can buy a house for less than it would cost him in rent for a lesser amount of space in a newly-built apartment project."

As proof, Mace cited Pollard Gardens, which his firm built in Arlington County recently. Rents there are $69 a month for one-bedroom units, "among the lowest in its class," Mace said. "But we know we can sell three-bedroom units for $60 to $65-a-month payments," he declared.

On this basis, Mace affirmed, "Rent decontrol will stimulate interest in home buying."

In Washington, real estate men looked on the Virginia decision to decontrol as an assist in their drive to end city rent control.

Gives Reason

Bauer of the Building Owners and Managers Association pointed out the District rent control authority runs out only three weeks after the Virginia decontrol becomes effective. "Decontrol in one area is compelling reason for decontrolling the whole area," he said.

He warned that post-decontrol rents in Virginia will spurt "higher if the District and Maryland stay controlled. There will not be a free market and people of Virginia will have no choice other than to stay put. This would diminish restraint of owners in fixing rents."

Rush of the Washington Real Estate Board said his organization favored decontrol in the city last year, and the Virginia move "will give us additional strength." He said 64,000 housing units have been authorized in the Greater Washington Area since May 1, 1947. Rents on these units, which were not subject to rent controls, have been higher than those under controls, he pointed out.

Experience in other areas with decontrol have been cited by rent control supporters as warnings of what could happen in this area.

BLS Makes Study

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics recently completed a study of rents in seven cities which were decontrolled. From one third to three fifths of all rental units received increases and these ranged from 6.6 to 16.7 percent.

The cities checked were Dallas, Knoxville, Jacksonville, Houston, Topeka, Spokane and Salt Lake City.

Edelman of the CIO Housing Committee said union members in decontrolled areas have reported that "the longer controls are off, the more rents go up."

In Bedford, Va., a small town in the southwest section of the Old Dominion, rent ceilings were lifted by the Housing Expediter last December 15. By the first week in January, rents rose an average of 35 per cent and by February 1, the average soared to 50 percent and is continuing upward, Edelman said. Some families have had two increases in this period.

Builders Aim To Popularize Home-Owning

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

Chicago, Feb. 22.—The Nation's 16,000 organized home builders have come up with a double-barreled plan to win buyers and influence the public.

The annual convention of the National Association of Home Builders, in session here, has tentatively approved plans to raise $500,000 for public relations program, to sell the benefits of home ownership over Government-subsidized public housing and cooperative programs.

Members of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington would be assessed $2 for every home or apartment unit started, raising an estimated $40,000. Half would be spent for a local public relations program and half would go to the national organization for national publicity on home-ownership benefits.

For Use "Preventively"

The fund would not be spent to defeat any specific legislation, such as rent control, cooperative and public housing measures, but in "preventive" public relations on a local level to make demand for home ownership overshadow demand for subsidized housing.

The second plank in the program is for intense concentration on producing a much better designed house, of sounder construction, with a larger floor area and more equipment, than has ever been offered, by sharing costs and profits.

The favorite topic this year among the 6000 delegates is "design," with emphasis on modern, contemporary architecture. The feeling is that they must so improve their product that demand for new homes is created the same way automobile manufacturers create a desire for yearly new models.

This can be done by intensive use of new products and gadgets, plus new methods of house design which eliminate frills and some costs, leading builders and architects said.

Modern Design Popular

The severe modern home with low, sweeping lines and flat roof is gaining in buyer-appeal all over the country, reports state. Builders in such areas as Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Iowa, upper New York State and the Carolinas have met success with modern design. It has already been introduced in the Washington area in scattered developments with remarkable success.

Directors of NAHB announced resolutions calling for repeal of public housing and slum-clearance programs in which the taxpayers' money is involved, elimination of the office of housing expediter and of rent controls.

J. Wesley Buchanan, Washington, was named regional vice president for the Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia area.

1949 Consumer Prices Declined 12.3%, Commerce Dept. Says

Consumer prices declined 2.3 percent during 1949 and at the start of this year were four percent under their postwar peak, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

While food prices had fallen farthest from their crest, they continued to be "high in relation to those for other commodities when compared with the prewar situation in either 1939 or 1926," the department said.

Clothing prices to the consumer took the biggest proportional decline, 7.3 percent, in 1949, but were off only 7.8 percent from their postwar highs, by department calculation.

Housefurnishings concentrated practically all of their postwar price decline—6.7 percent—into 1949.

The department noted that consumer prices rose to new highs in other respects — rent moving up 2.3 percent; fuel, electricity and refrigeration 1.4 percent, and other costs, classed as "miscellaneous," up 1 percent.

Food costs to the consumer, while down 9 percent from their postwar high, were off only 3.8 percent in 1949 although "prices of food at the farm" slumped 15 percent.

Glass Prices Raised An Average of 2.5%

Pittsburgh, Feb. 22 (AP).—Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., one of the Nation's largest glass makers, hiked its glass prices an average of 2½ percent today.

Rubber Hearings to Resume Today

A House armed services subcommittee decided yesterday to go ahead with its hearings on President Truman's request for a freer hand in guiding the Nation's 70-million-dollar synthetic rubber industry.

Although Chairmain Vinson (D., Ga.) and most of the committee members are opposed to the plan, the group felt that the rubber industry should have a chance to state its position.

Hearings will resume today at 10 a. m.

Substantially all the synthetic rubber plants built during the war remain under Government ownership, and under existing law they may be disposed of only with Congress' permission. This law, passed in 1948, expires next June 30. Vinson and other committee members want it extended for from three to five years.

Virginia Asked To End World Union Support

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22.—Two Washington area members of the General Assembly today introduced resolutions to rescind a 1944 measure supporting the principle of world federation.

State Senator Andrew W. Clarke of Alexandria called the movement for world government "a proposition to supersede and extinguish the Constitution of the United States."

Delegate J. Maynard Magruder of Arlington said policies of such groups as the United World Federalists "suggest that we commit national suicide."

Identical resolutions were introduced in both Houses of the General Assembly, asking that Virginia withdraw its 1944 indorsement of world government. At that time, Magruder said, "we were swept away by idealism."

Both Clarke and Magruder said they were motivated by recommendations of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Virginia.

But Paul Saunier, jr., chairman of the Virginia branch of United World Federalists, replied that "local opposition is part of a Nation-wide campaign being financed by diehard Midwest isolationists."

He named one as Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune and the Washington Times Herald.

"Colonel McCormick apparently got his timetable mixed up," Saunier said.

"A reporter for his Chicago paper called me three days ago to ask how the repealer move was getting on. It hadn't even been introduced."

Magruder told the House of Delegates that "the organizations principally behind this movement are international communism, the Federal Union Citizens Groups for United Nations Reform, and the United World Federalists."

The Right Rev. H. St. George Tucker, former presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States and now chairman of the advisory board of UWF in Virginia, replied to the Clarke and Magruder resolutions:

"Limited sovereignty must be assigned to the United Nations, with Russia, if possible, but without her if necessary, giving it powers to act to protect the world against aggression."

Darden Favors Boothe Bill

from H. William Goodwyn, a Richmond lawyer.

He said the only reason no one had appeared in opposition to the antisegregation bill was that "they are taking it for granted you are not going to seriously consider the bill."

Goodwyn called supporters of the Boothe bills "a great array of honorable and pious people who have no more love for the colored people than you or I."

Friends of the colored people, he added, "would let this matter stand as it is."

Boothe summed up the case for his proposals by saying that "the great majority of us in the General Assembly have said this was not a matter for Federal action."

"But the State of Virginia has not met manfully, except for the Byrd anti-lynching bill, any question of segregation in 50 years."

Langley Field Racial Policy Wins Praise

The Air Force is making a "thorough-going effort" to deal with Negro airmen at Langley Air Force Base, Va., on a basis of individual merit, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, said yesterday after a tour of the base.

Admitting that there are "some rough edges," Johnson praised the efforts at Langley Field "to do away with segregation and discrimination against Negroes as a group."

At the same time he expressed concern about the fate of Negro fliers in the proposed cutback in Air Force pilot strength. "The one major weakness" in the Air Force race policy, he said, is "the small number of Negro fliers and officers." Out of 30,000 rated pilots in the Air Force, he declared, only 146 are Negroes.

While voicing general praise for the Air Force and Navy policy concerning Negroes, Johnson said he hoped their example would be followed by the Army.

Army reluctance to end segregation, he declared, is damaging to the morale and efficiency of Negro personnel.

Mrs. Gichner to Speak To Chest Luncheon

Mrs. Henry Gichner, local chairman of the 1950 White House Conference for Children, will address the general membership luncheon meeting of the Family and Child Welfare Section of United Community Services at 12:15 p. m., Friday at the YWCA, 17th and K sts., nw.

The meeting will also include a progress report on the 1951 District public assistance budget by Preston B. Kavanagh of the home service committee, American Red Cross.

County-City Annexation Fight See-Saws in Virginia Assembly

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22 (AP).—The fight between county and city delegates over annexation today was a no-decision bout.

At least nobody was quite certain who won the round, which might be called the second in the contest.

The "compromise" bill to stay all annexation proceedings for two years was sent back to the House Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns for further study. First, however, city delegates obtained adoption of a "compromise" committee amendment to exempt pending annexation suits by a vote of 51 to 37. Fearful of passage, the county boys then moved for recommittal and it carried 50 to 38.

City boys won the first contest when the committee killed the Crockett Bill to require a favorable vote of both county and city before annexation of county territory by a city could proceed. The compromise was then worked out—the bill to stay proceedings two years, except for pending cases, and support of a resolution for a commission to study annexation before the 1952 session.

Delegate Edwin Lynch of Fairfax, was against annexation by first class cities (Alexandria has a survey underway), but agreeable to annexation by second class cities (Falls Church).

The Importance Of Being Earnest— About Unification

Municipal Judge Frank H. Myers glanced curiously at the bandage over the right eye of the defendant charged with drunkenness yesterday.

"How did you get hurt?" the judge asked.

The defendant, James Beard, 32, no fixed address, an Air Force veteran, explained he had got into an argument with four marines, who, he said, had made some nasty cracks about the Air Force.

As Beard walked out after being fined $1, Myers cautioned him:

". . . and don't forget the armed forces now are unified!"

Japanese Says Russia Used Germ Warfare

Hatano, Japan, Feb. 22 (AP).—Former Japanese Army Major Hiromoto Iinuma today accused Russia of using germ warfare against the Japanese in Manchuria during the war.

Iinuma was recently repatriated from Siberia where he was a witness in the Russian trials of 12 Japanese accused of germ warfare. He said former Col. Torajiro Kitamura told him in jail at Khabarovsk the Russians had thrown cans containing anthrax germs into Japanese-occupied Manchuria.

Iinuma said the incident occurred in 1944, before Russia and Japan were at war.

Wide Changes In Farm Law Are Proposed

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Efforts by Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) to head off another potato price support scandal this year, may bring about a complete overhauling of the Nation's basic farm law.

The Senate will take up today a proposal by Lucas to refuse price support payments to potato planters this year "unless marketing quotas are in effect."

Lucas' proposal, ironically, is tacked onto a Senate Agriculture Committee resolution that would have just the opposite effect for cotton and peanuts. The bill would permit an increase of hundreds of thousands of acres in cotton this year. Cotton and peanuts are in about as bad a surplus position as potatoes. Lucas' amendment would tighten up potato supports. The only difference is that cotton may be stored longer than potatoes—so that the day of final settlement will be longer postponed.

Five Amendments Up

Already five amendments to Lucas' proposal are in the hopper. Several threaten wide changes in the 1949 act, known as the Anderson-Gore bill for its authors, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) and Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.).

These include:

1. The most important, offered by four Republicans, Senators John J. Williams (Del.), Irving M. Ives (N. Y.), Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.) and Robert G. Hendrickson (N. J.).

It would, first, abolish the dual parity set up in the Anderson law, and, second, put into effect at once a sliding scale of price supports for the so-called basic or storable commodities.

Under the Anderson law, the priviliged basic commodities must be supported at not less than 90 percent of parity in 1950, and not less than 80 percent in 1951. After that supports may be fixed at between 75 and 90 percent by the Secretary of Agriculture. The amendment would repeal the 1950 and 1951 schedules.

Higher of Two Formulas

The Anderson law also sets up a new parity formula based on average prices for the last 10 years. This replaces the old formula based on average prices during 1909-14.

2. An amendment by the same four Republicans, that would make Lucas' amendment apply to potatoes "harvested" after passage of the bill. Lucas' proposal would apply to potatoes "planted" after the bill's passage. This change would make virtually all this year's potato crop subject to the proposed restrictions. Under Lucas' wording, 30 percent or more would escape.

3. An amendment by Minority Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Neb.) to bar Canadian or other potatoes from this country, whenever the supply in this country is in excess of requirements.

Two Other Amendments

4. An amendment by Senators George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) and William Langer (R., N. D.) would liberalize Lucas' amendment. In addition to paying supports to potatoes planted under marketing quotas it would also pay supporters to those planted under "marketing orders." In effect, this amendment would leave conditions virtually as they are, as most of the late potato areas will be covered by marketing agreements this year.

5. The last amendment, offered by Colorado Senators Eugene D. Millikin, (R.) and Edwin C. Johnson (D.), would accomplish for wheat just what the basic resolution would accomplish for cotton, and just the opposite of what the Lucas amendment would do for potatoes—increase the allowable coverage.

—With Shirley Povich

HANK GREENBERG has reintroduced the interesting subject of rabbit ears among ball players. The new general manager of the Cleveland Indians is now threatening to oust from his park any loudly booing fans who might get on the nerves of his athletes.

"Ball players have rabbit ears," Greenberg explains. "Try as hard as they might they can't shut out the boos. No matter how faint, one boo can give a player the false feeling that most fans are against him."

POVICH

He isn't concerned with the mere second-guessers among the customers, only the "abusive pop-offs, those two or three obnoxious fans in every park who boo a player so much he develops the feeling he'd rather play on the road than at home."

Greenberg may be cutting out a larger order for himself than getting back that pennant the Indians blew last season. Where the privileges of the fan who pays his buck-20 stop, is apt to be a Solomon-like decision. And the line between abusiveness and loudness isn't easily defined, either.

Rabbit ears are no exclusive appendage of the ball players, however. Certain umpires have suffered from the same sensitive hearing, and many a ball player has been thumbed out of a game for remarks that he didn't calculate might be within the umpire's hearing.

Years ago, Umpire Brick Owens suddenly wrenched off his mask from behind the plate and pointed vigorously at the Washington bench. "I heard that," he yelled at Outfielder Heinie Manush, "and you are out of the game."

When Manush protested he hadn't said anything loud enough to be overheard, Owen came back, "I got rabbit ears."

With nothing more to lose, Manush let the umpire have it with, "I always did think you could hear better than you could see."

But Greenberg is correct about the players' sensitivity to boos, and no less than Ted Williams has borne him out. "If there are 10,000 fans cheering and one booing, I hear the boo." Williams has often said.

GENERAL MANANGER Billy Evans of the Detroit Tigers just a couple of months ago brought up the subject of the home-town fans booing certain ball players. He admitted it was one of the reasons Detroit traded Dick Wakefield to the Yankees.

"Our Detroit fans were down on Wakefield so much that I felt sorry for the boy all last year," said Evans. "We liked Wakefield, but we wanted to trade him away from Detroit before they broke his heart."

The ball player who achieved the greatest triumph over the home-grown boos is probably the Nats' Sherry Robertson. For years, he got it good at every fumble or failure with the bat. As Clark Griffith's nephew, he was particularly vulnerable. His chief crime was that he couldn't pick his relations.

But Young Robertson never registered any dismay, even though he felt it. He stayed in the lineup, kept taking that beautiful cut with his bat, and won the Washington fans to him with his gutty display. The fan who now boos Sherry draws black looks from his neighbors.

NOT ALL THE BOOS directed at ball players are especially meaningful. Babe Ruth was invariably hooted on the road when he walked up to the plate, but he'd greet it with smiles. The Babe knew they were polite boos, a tribute to him, and that booing was the thing to do for the same fans who were eager to applaud when he pleased them with a home run.

It's significant that the game's bigger figures get the louder boos. Williams, DiMaggio and Feller get them now. They know that when the time comes that they are not booed, they're no longer important.

It's significant, too, that Bill Veeck never concerned himself with the fans' booing, even the abusive ones, while he was running the Cleveland ball club for four years more successfully than any team was ever operated. Greenberg is moving in on delicate ground. Maybe the fans won't like what he is saying. Maybe they got rabbit ears, too.

For Medal

Russell Tops Ferrell, Klein In Ballplayers Golf Playoff

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22 (AP).—Jack Russell, formerly of the Washington Senators, had to play "extra innings" today to take medalist honors in the eleventh national baseball players golf championship.

Russell, Wes Ferrell, former Washington Senators' pitcher, and Lou Klein, Cincinnati Reds infielder, finished the 18-hole qualifying test deadlocked with 75s. They played an extra nine holes and Russell came in with a one over par 36.

Klein and Ferrell let a flip of the coin break their tie for second place with 40s. Ferrell lost medalist honors when he three putted the seventeenth and missed a short putt on 18. He used 11 strokes on the last two holes of the Miami Springs Country Club course.

Only 11 players broke 80. Allie Reynolds, New York Yankee pitcher, rallied for a 34 on the back nine after taking a 43 going out.

Qualifying scores:

Jack Russell, former St. Louis Cardinals pitcher, 38, 37—75; Wes Ferrell, former Washington Senators pitcher, 36, 39—75; Lou Klein, Cincinnati Reds infielder, 38, 37—75; Allie Reynolds, New York Yankees pitcher, 43, 34—77; Dizzy Dean, former St. Louis Cardinals pitchers, 42, 35—77; Ed Levy, formerly of New York Yankees, 39, 38—77; Dizzy Trout, Detroit Tigers pitcher, 40, 37—77; Paul Waner, former Pittsburgh Pirates outfielder, 38, 39—77; Judge Joseph Monahan, Boston, 38, 40—78; Lou Kretlow, St. Louis Browns pitcher, 40, 39—79; Jim Ayres, Cincinnati Reds pitcher, 40, 39—79; Curtis Mitchell, formerly of Atlanta Crackers, 40, 41—81; Leonard Mayo, formerly of Atlanta Crackers, 40, 41—81; Lou T. Ordway, West Palm Beach Indians, 40, 41—81 (withdrew); Judge Phil O'Connell, President Florida International League, 39, 42—81, Gerry Priddy, Detroit Tigers infielder, 42, 39—81.

Forty-two players teed off and the field will be divided into three flights for match play starting tomorrow, with the championship, Miami and baseball executives flights. Finals will be played Sunday.

Redskins Sign Eddie Le Baron

Eddie LeBaron yesterday became the fifth rookie Redskin to succumb to the persuasiveness of Coach Herman Ball to the extent of signing a contract.

It's a good guess that LeBaron will receive about $7500 for his first year of pro football.

The College of Pacific three-time Little All-America quarterback was reluctant about disclosing the exact salary figure. Of course, the Redskins always are.

LeBaron admitted to a pointed question that $8500 was "awfully close" to the original amount he had his sights on. And, he intimated, that the Redskins were at least $1000 below it.

A player with LeBaron's national reputation would have commanded $10,000 in the days when National League and All-America Conference teams were bidding against each other for talent.

LeBaron, only 20, is well aware of that fact but thinks he's doing all right. Sensible Eddie said, "After all, you can't walk into business and make the kind of money football pays even under the league merger."

28 D C. Golfers Fly to Florida

Twenty-eight local golfers, cooperating in an experiment with Capital Airlines, yesterday flew to Jacksonville, Fla., to partake of a five-day links holiday at Ponte Vedra course.

Max Elbin, Burning Tree professional, was put in charge of tournaments among the D. C. players. The flight returns home Sunday. If the trip is successful, it will be adopted next winter as a regular winter golfing tour.

Braun Gets 38 Points as Knicks Whip Caps, 89-81

Special to The Post

New York, Feb. 22.—Second-place New York again turned back 4th-place Washington, 89-81, in an NBA game here tonight.

Chief thorn for the Caps was Carl Braun who had a hot night, bagging 38 points. But it was Ray Lumpp, who came into the game late in the third quarter, who broke the game wide open.

At the time of Lumpp's appearance, the Caps were leading, 65-63, after having overcome an early 11-point deficit. Lumpp scored seven points in a row to break a 67-67 tie.

Braun scored 12 of his points in the first quarter when the Caps trailed, 18-15, after making a flurry at the end of the period.

Braun made 18 of his points on free throws but missed eight as he went to the foul line 26 times to set an NBA record.

It was as rugged a game as ever was played here. In all, 44 personals were called on the Caps. Don Otten, Chuck Gilmur and Chick Reiser all went out on personals. Then Coach Bob Feerick, Dick O'Keefe, Freddie Scolari and Bones McKinney finished up with five personals each.

The Knicks committed 31 personals.

Bones McKinney dislocated a knuckle in the little finger of his left hand and had to leave the game with the painful injury. He came back after treatment from Knick Trainer Jim Envins and after the Knicks took a 40-21 halftime lead.

In the third period, big Don Otten hit for 13 points to spark a rally that enabled the Caps to take over at last. But Lumpp added those seven valuable points to Braun's torrid total for the Knicks' fifth win this season over Washington.

The Hawks led, 65-58, late in the third quarter, but the Bullets came back to tie the score for the eighth time, 74-74, with three minutes left.

Teddy Tingling Quits Job Over Gussie's Panties

London, Feb. 22 (AP).—The designer of Gussie Moran's lace-trimmed tennis panties has quit his job as official usher for tennis stars at Wimbledon.

Teddy Tingling, a burly red-faced man, said he quit because of criticism of Gussie's panties by the all-England championship committee.

"The committee has been picking on me for a long time," said Tingling. "Every time there's a change in dress, up goes a howl. There was a wail in 1933 when Helen Jacobs appeared in shorts.

"Already I have sent my 1950 designs to Gussie Moran. Whatever I make for her, she will wear at Wimbledon."

Eagles Rout W. Maryland, Take 1st Place

American U. closed out its home season here last night with an 85-57 victory over Western Maryland that gave it undisputed leadership of the Mason-Dixon Conference.

While the Eagles were winning handily, Johns Hopkins stunned Loyola of Baltimore, 79-73, in Baltimore. The defeat was Loyola's second in 12 conference games. American U., which inflicted the other loss on Loyola, moved into first place with a record of 11-1.

The Eagles concluded their home schedule with 12 victories against a single A. U. gym defeat at the hands of Davis-Elkins. They won their fifth straight, and tenth in their last 11 games.

Western Maryland had a four-game winning streak but the Terrors were no match for A. U. in height and could not penetrate A. U.'s zone defense with any effectiveness. The Eagles trailed early at 12-6 but rolled to a 38-24 lead at half time.

Ronnie Garshag started hitting with his hook shot and topped his team with 19 points, followed by Leroy Ishman with 13. Sherwood Webster started fast for A. U. and had 10 of his 12 points in the first half.

Blair Wins County Title

With surprising ease, Montgomery Blair High defeated Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 42-24, yesterday at College Park and kept the Montgomery County basketball championship in Silver Spring.

A crowd of 4000 saw the playoff game between the two biggest schools in the county. It was a different story from the two previous closely contested games, the first won by B-CC, 44-43, and the second by Blair, 46-39.

The victory was the seventeenth in 20 games for Blair, and earned it a bid to the Metropolitan Washington and Maryland State Class A tournaments which take place in the next 10 days. Bethesda's record is 9-10.

Roach Suffers Possible Skull Fracture in Kayo

New York, Feb. 22. (AP).—Lavern Roach, Plainview (Tex.) middleweight, was taken to the hospital with "a severe hemorrhage and a possible skull fracture" tonight after being knocked out in the tenth round of a fight at St. Nicholas Arena.

The Texan was felled twice in the final round by George Small of Brooklyn.

Roach was carried from the ring on a stretcher and later was rushed to St. Clare's Hospital.

The hospital said Roach was unconscious when he arrived accompanied by Dr. Vincent Nardiello, physician of the New York State Athletic Commission.

Booth's 39 Pace Howard Victory

Newark, Feb. 22—Frank Booth scored 39 points tonight to lead Howard University of Washington, D. C., to a 67-56 victory over Lincoln University at the Newark Armory.

Hoyas Whip Penn, 78-73, Set Record

Philadelphia, Feb. 22. (AP). —Georgetown University broke away to a 78-73 basketball triumph over Pennsylvania before 2000 at the Plaestra tonight.

The combined 151 points broke the Palestra scoring record of 148 for two teams. The old record was made by Pennsylvania-Maryland and Pennsylvania-St. Joseph last season.

Penn's Herb Lyon was top in the scoring department with seven field goals and four fouls for 18 points. Six-foot three-inch John Brown with 16 markers did the most damage to the home five.

Fast breaking and excellent outside shooting kept the Hoyas in the contest, after Penn sported a 38-36 half-time advantage. The Quarkers could do little from the outside, and were pressed so closely that they had few chances under the hoop.

Dick Dougherty and Tom Davis twice brought the losers to within a point at 69-70 and 71-72, but Brown, Tom O'Keefe and Frank Alagia put the game on ice with layups under the basket.

Margarita in Dark On Harvard Job

Georgetown's Bob Margarita said last night he knew nothing about a report that he would fill the head football coaching berth at Harvard.

A New York columnist wrote that Margarita would succeed Art Valpey who quit Harvard to coach Connecticut. Margarita said, "I haven't applied for the job and nobody at Harvard has approached me."

Asked if he would be interested in returning to Harvard where he assisted Dick Harlow for two years, the 29-year-old Margarita said, "I'm perfectly happy at Georgetown. It's difficult to say whether or not I'd be interested. Just say I don't know a thing about it."

Central Upset, 41-31; Western Bows, 62-45

Eastern fought its way into the Interhigh basketball finals by reversing an earlier loss to defending champion Central and downing the Vikings, 41-31, last night at Uline Arena before a crowd of 1800.

In the second game of the double-header, McKinley Tech won a final round berth by thumping Western, 62-45. Tech will meet Eastern for the championship at 2 p. m. Saturday at Uline's Arena.

Central jumped off into an early 4-0 lead on baskets by Duke Pantos and Lou Glickfield and held an 8-7 lead after the first quarter.

Little Franny Dyer put the Eastern Ramblers ahead for the first time 30 seconds after the second quarter started with a lay-up. Richie Hite added a foul goal and Eastern led, 10-8. The Ramblers widened this marin to 16-11 at intermission.

The Vikings started off in the second half as though they were about to make a comeback and pulled up to 21-23 shortly after the fourth quarter opened.

However, Jimmy O'Donnell dumped in two foul goals and a field goal and Kenny Atchison added another basket to put Eastern ahead, 28-21, and the Ramblers held that margin from then on.

Western Starts Fast

Western looked as though it were going to spring another upset by taking a 6-0 lead in the first four minutes of the second game. The Red Raiders held a 13-9 advantage after one quarter as Stan Karas sank two long set shots in the period.

Tech's Trainers came back strong in the second half and the score was tied six times, with McKinley finally getting the edge at intermission, 30-28. Big Richie Gaskell contributed eight points to the Tech surge on unstoppable hook shots.

Jay Howard converted two charity tosses as the second half opened to knot the count at 30 all.

Tom McGill, Bill Breen and Snookie Kernan combined to boost Tech back into the lead to stay, 37-30 and the Trainers widened the margin as the game progressed.

Irish and Miami Discuss Plans For 1952 Game

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22 (AP).—University of Miami Football Coach Andy Gustafson said today a Notre Dame-Miami football meeting in the Orange Bowl in 1952 "is practically certain."

"We are hoping to bring Notre Dame here for the final games of the season in 1952 and 1953," Gustafson said.

"Whether they will agree to a 1953 game I don't know, but I'd say the 1952 game is practically certain."

December 2 has been picked as a tentative date for the 1952 contest.

Seals, Like Our Haight, Only Work to Eat

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

IF I WERE a seal, I would never become a millionaire.

Being a seal would end all my hopes of hitting an eight-horse parlay, because I never heard of a seal patronizing a race track, although if the betting continues to slack off, Havre de Grace might open a fish-betting window, if you know what I mean.

Not Haight

The seals—the kind to be featured in the Sportsmen's and Outdoors show at the Armory starting March 3—are paid in fish for their work.

As a seal, I'd probably starve to death in the bargain.

Imagine me trying to stand on one flipper with my tail in the air and balancing a balloon on the tip of my nose.

This trick, according to Capt. Harold Winston, famous seal trainer is worth one fair-sized fish, but I'd be a total loss even if he upped the stipend to a dozen tuna with several king mackeral tossed in for change.

However, I guess the seals and the Haights do have something in common. For instance, the seals are always hungry and work only to eat.

SEALS have great memories although nothing to compare with the elephant, who was nursed back to health by a jungle explorer and, years later, saw the man at a circus and lifted him out of the hard-board 25-cent seats and placed him in the $2 reserve section.

However, seals are smart, I'm told. If they do their act right, they immediately demand their fish reward. If they foul it up, often as not they won't even bother to try to collect. (Sometimes I wish our plumber worked on the same theory).

At a recent show, according to a clipping shown me by Publicist Jack Espey, one of Winston's seals slipped and made a fizzle of a fancy dive. Under the rules, she didn't have a fish coming to her.

After the act, Winston was returning the seals to their cage when this particular miss broke away, wobbled back to the tank and up the ladder. This time she dove perfectly and then scooted to the trainer for her pay.

"It was no dice," Winston is quoted. "She did wrong and I gave her no fish. I don't want her doing any dives when there are no customers around."

ON TWO OCCASIONS, Winston had to call off the act. One night the seals were locked in a room and somebody forgot to put the latch on the box containing fish for a week's meal. The seals managed to open the lid and devoured the whole larder.

The next day Winston prodded them to the tank, but all they would do was swim around, in lazy fashion.

On another occasion, Winston shipped them to Brazil. Fish were plentiful in that country, but for some reason, didn't appeal to the seals' taste buds.

They refused to work, although after three fishless days, they began to nibble, and pretty soon things were back to normalcy. The clipping says they became so attached to Brazilian fish that it was difficult to get them to work for home fry back in the States.

WINSTON will have three seals here, Joe, Sissy and Slicker. It was a Slicker, not the present one, who put seals in the big dough class.

"Some fishermen off Monterey (Calif.) caught this seal in with a net full of sardines. They turned the seal loose but he followed the boat for three days, so they pulled him back aboard," Winston says. "Slicker learned so fast that he became a Paramount movie star, earning $1500 a week. His best picture was 'Spawn of the North'."

Of course, Winston took the 15 hundred and Cissie settled for a couple of buckets of fish.

Commission Plans 80,000 Trout in Md.

By Ralph Murdock

STARTING MARCH 20, the Maryland Game and Inland Fish Commission expects to plant 80,000 legal size or over trout in its streams. Warm water fish restocking is already underway.

Murdock

So far the following fish have been successfully stocked: 36,000 adult largemouth black bass, 8000 smallmouths, 8500 crappie, and 52,000 bluegills. The latter figures reveal that the restocking of more than 100,000 warm water fish (just completed) represents just half the contemplated program.

COMPETITION IN the annual Silver Sailfish Derby of the Palm Beaches remained exciting right down to the finish wire, with catches registered the final day of the contest deciding the keen angling race for several of the major trophies of the contest.

The P. A. B. Widener trophy presented to the angler taking the heaviest sailfish during the Derby was nailed down the final day of the contest when Col. G. M. Bacharach of Arlington, Va., landed a 60-pounder measuring 8 feet in length.

Another local angler did alright for himself when he won the Henry Chanin trophy, by nabbing an 8-foot sail which weighed 56½ pounds. The nimrod was James O'Donnell of the District and the prize was awarded for scoring the highest number of points by weight and length combined.

THE CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP shoot conducted by the Berwyn Rod and Gun Club to establish the best trap shooter in the club will end on Sunday. The 150-target event started last Sunday but darkness called a halt to the proceedings before all of the contestants had participated.

Colt Winner By 2 Lengths Over Theory

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22 (AP).—Oil Capitol, one of the leading Kentucky Derby candidates, scored his initial victory as a 3-year-old today at Hialeah race course by winning the $10,000 added Everglades Handicap by two lengths.

Calumet Farm's Theory, Warren Wright's hope for a fifth Run for the Roses triumph, trailed the dark gray Oil Capitol by two lengths for second and George D. Widener's Lights Up was third, a head behind Theory and four lengths in front of Mrs. James Carson's Kinsman.

It was Oil Capitol's first victory as a 3-year-old. Tom Gray's bargain yearling concluded a whirlwind campaign as a juvenile with four consecutive victories, including three stake races.

Oil Capitol, named for the city of Tulsa, Okla.—the horse that eats boiled dandelion greens and sugared doughnuts—added $9,550 to his total earnings of $106,950 boosting his total earnings to $116,500—over $100,000 more than the $15,000 the Tulsa automobile dealer paid for him as a yearling.

But Oil Capitol was the better horse in the Everglades. His time of 1:50 at was 2 2/5 seconds off the track record—and world record equaling time—established by Calumet's Coaltown on February 14, 1949.

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks: Jockey Mike Mafale celebrated his first wedding anniversary by riding a winner on the Tuesday program at New Orleans. Mike expects to come North in time for the Laurel meeting. Can't keep a good horse down, not one like Oil Capitol. The colt showed his boss Kentucky Derby stuff at Hialeah. The Derby, by the way, is shaping up as a keen race with Your Host, Theory, Bed O'Roses and others due to make it a wide-open affair. The horse Realtor is in big demand at Hialeah. He has been claimed twice in a month for sums of $12,000 and $11,000. Apprentice Joe Culone seems to have lost none of his riding ability while serving a long suspension. He can't hope to catch Sam Boulmetis and Ted Atkinson at this meeting but he's making his appearance felt.—Bill.

W & L High Principal Solves His Coaches' Dissension Over Versatile Jim McFadden

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THERE WAS BITTER dissension in the coaching ranks at Washington-Lee High this week over Jim McFadden, 6-foot 4-inch athlete.

Basketball Coach John Rothrock claimed he needed McFadden, his high-scoring center, for W-L's game against Bullis Prep in Arlington this Friday night.

And Track Coach Ken Batson insisted that without McFadden in the high jump, W-L could not hope to win the North Carolina U. invitational track meet early Saturday morning in Chapel Hill.

The two events were separated by 10 hours and 250 miles. The problem seemed unsolvable to the coaches' satisfaction.

However, Principal Claude Richmond stepped in yesterday and arranged for McFadden to play in the basketball game and, immediately afterward, to fly overnight to Chapel Hill for the track meet.

FURMAN WILL replace William and Mary as George Washington University's November 11 opponent, and the game will be played in South Carolina. W&M, last month asked out of its GWU contract so it could resume relations with Virginia . . . When the Redskins signed up Lou Karras of Purdue, they got the services of one of the few bespectacled tackles in the business. The 230-pounder is nearsighted and wears contact lenses while playing . . . Forrest Miles, the Eastern High product, whose 9.7 seconds performance is the Interhigh record in the 100-yard dash, is running on Ohio State's freshman team . . . Forrest Tucker, a star of the movie "Iwo Jima," still has that old high school spirit. Last Friday, he turned up unannounced to cheer for his alma mater, W-L High, in its traditional basketball game against George Washington. GW won. . . .

JACK GEORGE, hailed as one of Washington's all-time schoolboy sports greats, is on the comeback trail. After failing to develop at Notre Dame, Jack moved to LaSalle in Philadelphia. There, he is the star of the freshman basketball team with a 15.3 average . . . No wonder the college basketball referees are getting a little dizzy. There are now five different rules governing treatment of fouls during the last two minutes of the game. The original N.C.A.A. rule has been "reinterpreted" differently by the Big Ten, Southern Conference, the 12 New York schools and the Ivy League. A few of the colleges still use the original rule.

AU Swims To Easy Win

Little American U. claimed the District collegiate swimming title yesterday, defeating George Washington's mermen, 57-17, in its Ward Circle pool.

The victory was the third over a District rival by the Eagles, who swamped Catholic U. and Georgetown in earlier meets.

American's Pete Swindler was the only double winner, taking the 50- and 100-yard freestyle events. The outclassed Colonials' only first place was diver Holt's.

Junior Police Receive $2500

The Junior Police and Citizens Corps has received a gift of $2500 from Sports America, an organization of sportswriters and sportscasters, it was announced yesterday.

The gift will be used for the community project, which seeks to teach boys and girls the value of protecting public and private property. The money came from an exhibition baseball game between the Washington Nats and Pittsburgh Pirates last summer.

The corps was founded in 1942 by Pvt. Oliver A. Cowan of the Metropolitan Police Department, who received the gift as director of the corps.

Reds, Wallace Conferred, Witness Says

By The Associated Press

A former undercover agent for the FBI testified yesterday that Henry A. Wallace once conferred with two well-known Pittsburgh Communists about support for his third party presidential campaign.

Matthew Cvetic was the agent. He told the House Un-American Activities Committee he himself was one of the pair of well-known Communist Party members. He identified the other as George Wuchinich.

Cvetic has been telling the committee how he bored into the Communist Party in western Pennsylvania and spent seven years as an active, trusted member while slipping reports on its activities to the FBI.

Today he named 13 men, headed by Organizer Steve Nelson, as the top level Reds in western Pennsylvania. He told of Communist efforts to infiltrate the key steel, coal and electrical industries.

Wuchinich, the witness said, was one of the 13 and his special fields were the Progressive Party and the American Slav Congress.

Conferred Nov. 11, 1947.

Cvetic said that he and Wuchinich conferred with Wallace and Wallace's campaign manager, "Beany" Baldwin, in the former Vice President's room at the Schenley Hotel in Pittsburgh on November 11, 1947.

Wallace said at his South Salem, N. Y., home:

"I can say with absolute flatness I had no awareness whatsoever of meeting any Communist in Pittsburgh."

He added that he recalled meeting Wuchinich in Pittsburgh, but not Cvetic. He said even today he had no personal knowledge that Wuchinich was a Communist.

C. B. Baldwin, who was Wallace's campaign manager, said he and Wallace had talked to many people in Pittsburgh.

"Not believing in loyalty tests," he said, "we made no effort to ascertain the individual political beliefs of any person who sought an interview or who accompanied any group to see Wallace."

Cvetic testified:

"Wallac and Baldwin questioned Wuchinich and myself on the number of Slav votes we felt we could deliver in our capacity as officers of the Slav congress.

"At the time both Wuchinich and I were well-known Communist Party members in Pittsburgh."

He said their Communist membership wasn't discussed but their names had come out in an expose by the Pittsburgh Press.

Assumed Wallace Knew

"You are assuming," Representative Walter (D., Pa.) inquired, "that Wallace and Baldwin knew you were Communist Party members because of the publicity?"

"Yes," Cvetic answered. "They are both men of intelligence, and the local Progressive Party leaders knew we were Communists."

At the time of the meeting, the Progressive Party hadn't been organized under that name, Cvetic told reporters that what was discussed was a new party, "a new, Progressive Party."

Now, he said, the Communists "are losing ground in the Progressive Party" and he thinks his own testimony "might rock them a little bit."

And he testified that the Reds didn't have much luck recruiting members in steel plants and coal fields.

Progress in Colleges

But he reported they have been making some progress in carrying the party line into colleges and youth organizations through the Labor Youth League in Pittsburgh. Committee members indicated they might dig more deeply into that situation.

In addition to Nelson and Wuchinich, recently transferred from Pittsburgh to New York, Cvetic said these are the men, and the fields in which they specialize, who make up the Communist Party's high command in western Pennsylvania:

Andy Onda, steel; William Albertson, district secretary; Ben Careathers, Negroes; Leo Fisher, nationality groups; Dave Grant, organizer in East Pittsburgh, active at Westinghouse Electric Co.; Sam Reed, General Electric Co. at Erie; Bill Gordon, Onda's helper; Joe Mankin, hotel and restaurant workers; Harold Orzcik, youth movement; Alex Wright, Progressive Party; Milo Mamula, Civil Rights Congress.

Washington's First Notary Observes Her 89th Birthday

IT'S HER BIRTHDAY, TOO—Miss Lydia M. Fox of 2215 Washington Circle, who has been a notary public since 1897, observed her eighty-ninth birthday anniversary yesterday. She conducts her business from her bedside. Her pet cat is named Victory

A cake with cherries and a hatchet, telegrams and visitors marked the eighty-ninth birthday yesterday of Miss Lydia Fox, believed to be the city's first public stenographer.

Miss Fox, who has maintained since 1920 a 24-hour notary public service at her home, 2215 Washington Circle, joyfully said: "It is lovely to have lived so long and to have so many friends. The world is a very nice place."

Looking back, Miss Fox, who remembers when the National Geographic kept its records in a shoebox in a roll-top desk, says that her career as public stenographer and notary has been interesting and romantic.

And speaking of the romantic, she said yesterday that "no end of people, now, call me up at midnight asking how to get married without delay."

A native of Deauville, Judson County, N. Y., she studied shorthand and typewriting in Oswego, N. Y., and came to Washington in 1880, establishing herself as a public stenographer at the Capitol a short time later. Aside from several years in the Philippines just before World War I, she has lived here ever since.

Hurt in Fall

About 10 years ago she suffered a crippling fall that has confined her to her bed and led to her starting a 24-hour notary public service. She returned last Friday from a three-week stay in the hospital, due to an attack of pneumonia, and is again available to clients.

Miss Fox can tell many an amusing and nostalgic tale of old Washington.

Among those for whom she worked was Frank Lawler, a Chicagoan who served in the House of Representatives from 1885 to 1891, and was famous for his malapropisms.

He would come to her and say, "I would like to indict some letters."

Miss Fox recalls, too, a speech in which he said, "the mass of the population in large cities is composed of the bulk of the people."

A Playwright

Perhaps the strangest of Miss Fox's clients was the man wearing a big slouch hat and long dark cape who arrived at closing time one rainy night. He gave her a hard-to-read manuscript written in an unusual hand to transcribe. When he returned he paid her in gold pieces, which he took from a black bag.

The Federal Diary

Reorganization to Give FCC 4 Operating Bureaus, 3 Staff Units

Federal Communications Commission is being reorganized along functional lines.

Chairmar. Wayne Coy has informed Congress that the agency will have four operating bureaus —broadcast, common carrier, safety and special services, and field engineering and monitoring. It also will have three major staff units, which will be: The chief engineer, chief accountant, and general counsel offices. Budget and personnel will be placed under a new office of administration.

FCC is requesting higher grades and salaries for most of its officials who will be assigned to the bureau and staff positions.

STORY: The Bulletin, the publication of the National Association of Employes of Collectors of Internal Revenue, carries this story:

Screams for help heard coming from a house caused a passing pedestrian to rush to the open door and offer his aid. The distracted mother explained that her son had just swallowed a quarter. The stranger grabbed the child by the feet and shook him vigorously. In a moment the coin dropped out of the child's mouth. The relieved mother was profuse in her thanks.

"Oh, doctor! How lucky it was for us that you happened by just at this moment," the mother said. "You certainly knew how to get it out of him."

"But, madam, I'm not a doctor," explained the stranger, "I'm a deputy collector of the United States Internal Revenue."

STATUS BILL: Representative Keough (D., N. Y.) has introduced a bill to give permanent Civil Service status to those war service or temporary employes who are in grades GS-7 and above, and who have been in the Federal service for at least six years.

LEAVE TIGHTENING: Employes in the Army's Quartermaster General Office can be excused for being late to work three times during a calendar year. They will be charged with an hour's annual leave for each additional tardiness. In a memo, Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman also reminded employes of sick-leave rules and unauthorized absences.

PATENT OFFICE: The House has approved a bill to set up under the Patent Commissioner two assistant commissioners and 12 examiners in chief, all to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. All other employes would be appointed by the Commerce Secretary upon the advice of the Patent Commissioner.

SEVERANCE PAY: Chairman Johnston of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee, is sponsoring a bill to provide a maximum of 90 days' severance pay to employes who are laid off through no fault of their own. The employes would be entitled to a day's pay for each month of service up to 90 days' pay. A similar bill by Representative Withrow (R., Wisconsin), has been introduced in the House.

GAO: It keeps busy. This is last year's record: General Accounting recovered $86,669,776 that had been either illegally or erroneously paid out; examined 61,000 money warrants; audited 23 million vouchers; examined 1,200,000 contracts; settled 563,000 claims; reconciled 459 million checks; rendered 1300 decisions to Federal agencies; inspected 1400 offices; submitted 22 audit reports to Congress on 28 corporations and three agencies, and made 3800 replies to individual members of Congress. Since 1941, GAO has recovered more than 600 million dollars.

SEC: Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) speaking: "If we have any criticism whatsoever of the Securities and Exchange Commission from the efficiency point of view, we think you are top-heavy in the District and are light in the field. The field is the backbone of your activities." The agency has 720 employes here, 322 in field offices.

MEETING: An institution on executive selection and development will be held at 7:30 p. m. this evening in the Archives Auditorium. Speakers will be Civil Service Commissioner James Mitchell, John Corson of The Washington Post, and Arthur Ayers of the American Viscose Corporation.

Pink-Coated Fox Hunters Fight Fire

Pink-coated members of the Potomac Hunt helped fight a fire which destroyed a large barn on Mount Prospect Farm, on mile from Travilah, Md., at noon yesterday.

Members of the hunt had gathered outside the barn about 11 a. m., gone through all the rituals including the stirrup cup and then cast their hounds.

The hounds were in full pursuit of a large red fox when a farm employe called William C. Hanson, owner of the farm, back to the barn. The hunters pursued their way to be met a few moments later by Mrs. Alice Berry, honorary whip, who announced the "big barn" was on fire. The riders abandoned the chase and rode back to aid in rescuing horses, stock and equipment.

Woman members of the hunt held the horses while the men dashed into the fiercely burning barn to pull out four valuable horses and six cows as well as tack from the meet room in one wing of the barn.

Volunteer firemen from Gaithersburg, Washington Grove and Rockville departments fought the blaze for 3½ hours with water from a conservation pond about 1100 feet away.

Damage was estimated at $10,000 but cause of the fire was not determined.

Mount Prospect Farm is a show place literally created by Hanson, who is a retired vice president of the E. G. Schafer Co., Washington plumbing supply firm. The entire establishment was planned by Mr. and Mrs. Hanson. None of the farm's working area can be seen from the house although it is quite near. Hanson breeds Aberdeen-Angus cattle and Berkshire hogs owns several thoroughbred horses and also breeds running horses for sale.

Police and firemen broke into a flaming storage garage at 118 6th st. se. about 11:34 p. m. Tuesday and found Holland in a dazed condition crawling on his hands and knees toward the door. He suffered burns on the face and hands. Police said he was believed to be owner of the building, which is used to store building supplies, but he was unable to give a coherent account because of his injuries.

A butcher knife was found beside the body, according to Montgomery County Police at Silver Spring. The hog pen is a small sloping-roofed building into which he had to crawl.

The body was found by his brother, Richard Soper. Police said Soper attempted to drown himself in the watering trough recently. He is married and has a 2-year-old child. He was born and has lived all of his life on the farm.

Dr. F. J. Broschart, county medical examiner, issued a certificate of death by suicide. The body was removed to the DeWitt Donaldson funeral home, Laurel, Md.

"SIDEWALK CAFE"—Coffee and doughnuts are served to potential buyers lined up outside Lacy's Television and Appliance Store, 8th and E sts. nw. The shoppers arrived well in advance of the store's opening yesterday

Merchandise George Washington never dreamed of went on the block yesterday, drawing hordes of District residents to local stores on a gay, budget-cheating spree.

Despite a soupy drizzle—slated to blow clearer and colder today—eager folk on the bargain hunt formed long lines at downtown stores, filled their shopping bags and left proprietors generally happy.

"The crowd was of excellent size," said Police Captain Howard V. Covell of No. 1 Precinct, "but perhaps not quite as big as the usual February 22 turnout."

Yesterday's mild weather—Washington's first since last Saturday—is due to end today, with the Weather Bureau forecasting a top of 40 degrees and a low in the middle 20s for tonight. The bureau's forecast was for strong northwesterly winds.

The Police Department used an extra 50 men to keep traffic flowing and block-long lines in order throughout the 8:30 a. m. to 2 p. m. holiday store hours.

For the early birds, some arriving Tuesday night to make the head of the line, there were these modern-age door prize bargains:

A television set for 99 cents. E. L. Maxton of 1725 17th st. nw., nabbed that one from a G st. appliance store. He earned it. He arrived at the store about 11 p. m. Tuesday. The second and third persons in this shop were two British war brides, Mrs. Marie Bryant and Mrs. Ray Garrison of 2020 Shepherd st. ne. They went home each with a 99-cent cabinet model radio.

A silver fox fur coat for $5 . . . typewriters for 99 cents per . . . phonograph records at 5, 10 and 15 cents a disc . . . a $19 electric refrigerator . . . watches and rings 50 cents to $1.

One merchant put on sale two hats. The 6⅞ size went for 98 cents. The 7¼ brought $1.96.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Chandler of 4th st. and Cabin John rd., Cabin John, were rewarded for an 11 p. m. Tuesday to 8:30 a. m. Wednesday virgil on camp stools at another radio store by copping a $5.88 phonograph for their 6-year-old daughter.

"It was a terrific day: like selling nylon stockings in wartime," said one camera store owner last night. So good, he has decided to run his G. W. price tags until Friday night.

Many stores were offering merchandise at prices from one third to two thirds off.

For Government workers, especially husband without youngsters at home, the midweek holiday was a whale of a day for sleeping. The shopping crowd was almost exclusively feminine.

Throughout the day, several patriotic and fraternal group made pilgrimages to Washington Monument for wreath-laying ceremonies, conducted special holiday meetings and parades.

The Advisory board of the Masonic clubs of the District placed a wreath at the Monument during brief 10 a. m. services. President Lucian Jordan conducted the ceremonies, assisted by Col. Cheney L. Bertholf, past national president of League of Masonic Clubs.

At Mount Vernon, 35 Veterans of Foreign Wars representatives participated in the group's fifteenth annual observance of Washington's Birthday.

The George Washington Post No. 1 and District Post 17, Irish War Veterans, of the American Legion also made its annual pilgrimage to Mount Vernon yesterday morning.

At 9:30 a. m., nearly 1000 parishioners of the Blessed Sacrament Church of Alexandria observed the day with a mile-and-a-half parade from Fairlington School. Also participating was the Capt. Edward A. Duff Post of the Catholic War Veterans.

Franklin Powell, a senior at James Monroe High School in Fredericksburg, Va., won the annual Washington Birthday dollar throwing across the Rappahannock River there. His toss fell on the opposite bank, just a few feet short of the record 392-foot toss made last year.

Hydrogen Bomb Control Urged In Lent Talks

Bishop Dun, Childs, Lodge, Rev. Cranford Speak in Services At Cathedral

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

"From battle and murder, and from sudden death,
"Good Lord, deliver us."

These lines from the Book of Common Prayer were read to the congregation in Washington Cathedral yesterday where a seven-hour continuous service of meditation and prayer was held on the theme "God, Man and the Hydrogen Bomb."

The service marked Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the Lenten season. During the day nearly 3000 persons came to contemplate in the words of Episcopal Bishop Angus Dun "the dakness of perplexity" man faces now that science has unlocked the secret of a bomb more terrifying than what resulted from splitting the atom.

Dr. Dun said he had taken as "a kind of watchword" for the service the sentence:

"Under the judgment of God we seek light in our darkness and freedom from ignoble fears."

Fifty ministers, representing churches of nearly all the Protestant faiths, participated in Holy Communion opening the service.

Columnist Marquis Childs, Senator Henry Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) and Baptist Minister Clarence Cranford spoke from the Cathedral pulpit of the Nation's moral responsibilities now that it has embarked on a course of developing a hydrogen bomb. A message was read from Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) who was unable to reach Washington for the service when his plane was grounded in Ohio.

Childs said that the Nation is "deeply disturbed" because its leadership has failed to look "to a new exploration of the potentialities for world peace."

Humphrey, in his message, said this Nation should seek Russia's cooperation in submitting a proposal to the United Nations for a universal disarmament conference.

"Our proposals for disarmament should include the absolute prohibition of the manufacture of weapons for mass destruction, limited not only to atomic and hydrogen bombs, but to conventional armaments as well."

He said the United States should stand ready to "consider practical suggestions as to how necessary supervision and control can be exercised" and also should be ready to "turn over our own stockpiles of destruction to the United Nations as part of such an international agreement and in concert with all other nations of the world."

Lodge declared that the United States must build itself to such a strength "that the Soviet will ask us for a disarmament conference. Then—and only then—will there be a real prospect of accomplishing results."

Dr. Cranford, minister of Calvary Baptist Church, declared "Science and invention cannot save us." The future destiny of man on this planet depends on how soon and how well mankind learns the two lessons:

"'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind,' and 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'"

Ash Wednesday

Thousands Mark Lent Opening

By Jack Larts—The Washington Post

ASH WEDNESDAY—In St. Patrick's Church, a priest makes the sign of the cross in ashes from burned palms on the forehead of Catholic parishioners as Lent begins

Thousands of Washingtonians visited churches on Ash Wednesday yesterday, marking the opening of the 40-day Lenten period.

First of the noonday services sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches was held at the National Presbyterian Church and attracted the largest crowd for this service in recent years.

Size of the crowd was traced by Dr. Edward L. R. Elson, pastor of the church, to two factors—'the sensitiveness of the people about the problems of the times and the fact that the speaker was Dr. Louis H. Evans, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood, the largest Presbyterian Church in America."

Reminder that man is dust and to dust must return was given in the traditional ashes placed on the foreheads of worshipers in Catholic and in some Episcopal churches.

Ph.D. to Man, 21, Among 677 Degrees At GW; Benjamin Franklin Graduates 284

A 21-year-old foreign-born student received a doctor of philosophy degree from George Washington University at winter convocation exercises last night in Lisner Auditorium.

The recipient, Habeeb Bacchus, became the youngest student ever to win a Ph. D. degree from the university. A graduate of Howard University, he wrote his honors thesis on "Functional Activity of the Zones of the Adrenal Cortex as Indicated by Steroid and Ascorbic Acid Histochemistry." He lives at 2624 Kirkwood pl., Hyattsville, Md. He was born in Triumph, British Guiana.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, presented degrees to 677 students at the winter exercises traditionally held on February 22 in honor of George Washington, who left 50 shares of canal stock for the founding of "a university in the Nation's Capital."

In his address, Marvin spoke of man's struggle for individual freedom and warned against the "hardness of formalized state ways."

"As we try to put our responsibilities on to civic units we lose this freedom and our strengths of creative power," he said, "and become like kept women, with responsibilities lifted, moral values numbed, will deadened, zeal lost and life inert."

Another foreign-born student, Daniel L. Reverdin, 27, a native of Geneva, Switzerland, also received his doctor's degree. His thesis was on "Electron Optical Exploration of Space Charge in a Cut-Off Magetron." Reverdin lives at 3015 Rodmon st. nw.

The Rev. Bernard Braskamp, chaplain of the House, pronounced the invocation and benediction. Dean Elmer L. Kayser, marshal of the university, announced the convocation.

Benjamin Franklin Class Warned of 'Staleness'

There is a growing belief that it is possible for professional men to have "too much schooling," President John T. Kennedy of Benjamin Franklin University told 284 graduating students at commencement exercises last night. Speaking at the Statler Hotel midyear ceremonies, he said: "Every athletic coach knows that too much preparation for a game is apt to make the players stale. So it is possible that excessive schooling, instead of sharpening the wits, may dull them."

Two hundred and ten students received Bachelor of Science and Special Graduates degrees and 74 were awarded Master of Commercial Science degrees.

The property will be transferred to the Pick corporation March 1 and its original name, "The Lee House," will be restored, Pick said.

Pick said that the hotel, which has been managed by the Sheraton Corp. of America for the Tishman interests during several years, was in "excellent physical condition," and that further improvements are planned.

Police Snag 12 Non-Paying Boy Shoppers

In the hubbub of yesterday's bargain shopping, police picked up 12 boys who they said lifted shirts, shorts and sweaters from six stores.

Police reported the boys, from 15 to 17, carried shopping bags, but were not members of an organized shop-lifting band.

Store detectives spotted the thefts when they found the youngsters' bags contained price-tagged merchandise, but no sales slips.

The juveniles were turned over to the First Precinct with this loot, police said:

Hecht Co.: Three boys collected a quantity of shorts and shirts. Lansburgh's. Five accounted for about $30 worth of shirts. Goldenberg's: One boy swiped one sweater. Brodt's: One boy walked out with three hats. Brooks: Nine shirts to some of the same shoppers.

All the boys were released in custody of their parents pending Juvenile Court action.

Police said his auto struck a stop sign, swerved, then struck a tree. Trapped in his car for about 30 minutes, he was extricated by No. 2 Rescue Squad. Baumann was driving on a learner's permit, according to officers, and failed to negotiate a turn at the intersection.

In a similar early morning accident, Joseph M. Barnes, 21, of 1112 Owens pl. ne., suffered head, arm and leg injuries when his car struck a tree in the 4200 block of Massachussets ave. nw.

Taken to Emergency Hospital, his condition last night was described as "serious." Attaches said he suffered head, arm and leg injuries.

Barnes, a clerk for the Naval testing basin at Carderock' Md., told officers he fell asleep while driving.

Senate Group Backs Pinball Exemption

Richmond, Va., Feb. 22.—The Senate General Laws Committee today reported unanimously the Burton bill to exempt "amusement only" pinball machines with "free play" features from the State slot machine ban.

As introduced by Senator Frank P. Burton, of Patrick, the bill would legalize "coin-operated non-payout pinball tables, puck bowling tables, or similar devices, equipped with free play feature and used for amusement only."

The definition of illegal slot machines under present law includes coin-operated devices whereby the user "may secure additional chances or rights to use such machine, apparatus or device."

Burton said the purpose of his bill is "to clear up the law defining slot machines." He said that pinball machines with the free play feature, but for amusement only, may be interpreted as being legal under another section of the code.

Christoffel's Case Due to Be Given To Jurors Today

The Harold Christoffel second perjury trial was in recess yesterday—George Washington's Birthday—but the eight-woman, four-man jury is slated to receive the case today.

Federal District Judge F. Dickinson Letts, after listening to all-day closing arguments Tuesday, told the jury he will charge them this morning and then put the case in their hands.

The jury will be asked to decide:

1. Whether the one-time Milwaukee labor leader lied when he told the House Labor Committee March 1, 1947 he had never had Communist connections and never had been a Communist Party member.

2. Whether at least 13 members of the 25-member committee were physically present and heard him testify. The committee was inquiring into alleged subversive influences in unions.

Takoma Man Buried To Hips in Cave-in

William Bulford, 23, of 311 Ethan Allen ave., Takoma Park, Md., escaped serious injury yesterday when he was trapped in a ditch cave-in at Cheverly, Md.

Bulford was working in a water connection ditch at 5808 Dewey st., when the sides caved in, burying him to the hips. He was freed by the the Tuxedo-Cheverly Volunteer Fire Department and taken to Prince Georges General Hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. He was treated for brush burns and shock at the hospital and released.

Pat Hurley, Critical of Foreign Policy, Assails 'Secret' Pacts

Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, former Ambassador to China, yesterday called for an end to State Department "secret agreements."

Hurley, whom President Roosevelt once sent to Moscow to consult with Stalin, sharply criticized Secretary of State Acheson in a speech at the Carlton Hotel before the Sons of the American Revolution.

"Honorable Dean Acheson," Hurley told the annual Washington's Birthday luncheon, "has said that America failed in China because of the fumbling of Chiang Kai-shek. That statement is historically incorrect."

Asserting that China was surrendered to the Communists "in secret agreement at Yalta," Hurley then declared:

"The Secretary of State now admonishes the people to quit trying to pull some secret from under the bed, from under the chair, or from under the rug, and to attribute to such secret, America's failure in China.

"A good way to prevent America patriots from pulling these secret agreements out of hiding would be for the State Department to stop making them. It is improper for the State Department to hide commitments that they have made in our Nation's name from the American people. The people can not make intelligent decisions if they are not given all the facts."

Maj. Gen. Clovis E. Byers, former chief of staff of the Eighth Army in Japan, addressed the thirty-sixth joint Washington's Birthday celebration of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Children of The American Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution and Sons of the Revolution in the Interior Department auditorium.

Backing selective service, Byers declared that "the great head-on conflict between Christian democracy and atheistic communism" requires more than reliance on Divine Providence.

Mrs. Morris, Ex-U.S.Envoy's Widow, Dies

Philadelphia, Feb. 22 (AP).—Mrs. Roland S. Morris, 70-year-old widow of the former United States Ambassador to Japan, was killed today when her bed caught fire.

Mrs. Morris, the former Augusta Shippen West, was a direct descendant of Edward Shippen, the first mayor of Philadelphia.

A semi-invalid, she had been confined to her bed for some time. Her son, Attorney Edward Shippen Morris, said "there's no doubt that mother was smoking in bed."

Mrs. Morris' late husband, Roland Sletor Morris, who died in 1945, was a member of one of Philadelphia's oldest families. He was a descendant of Anthony Morris, the city's second mayor.

President Woodrow Wilson sent him on a secret mission to Siberia during World War I to determine whether the United States should support the White Russians against the Bolshevists in the Russian revolution.

From 1917 to 1921 he was Ambassador to Japan. After that time, he turned to politics and became Democratic State chairman.

Bigotry Charge Against Marvin Refuted by Group

A charge by Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) that George Washington University President Cloyd Heck Marvin was guilty of "racial and religious bigotry," backfired yesterday.

Representative Klein asserted in a press release that Marvin threatened reprisals against the Hillel Foundation and its campus director after the Jewish group indorsed an editorial in the student paper asking for admission of Negroes to GW. Klein said he learned of Marvin's actions from a Jewish telegraph agency dispatch.

From New York, Rabbi Arthur J. Lelyveld, national director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations for American universities, regretted that Klein "made serious charges . . . without having ascertained the facts from those directly concerned. Representatives of Hillel met last week with President Marvin . . . in a spirit of amity to discuss the best way in which to correct certain erroneous impressions growing out of a Jewish telegraphic agency story . . ."

Panama's New Envoy Welcomed

By Marie McNair

PANAMA'S new Ambassador, Rodolfo Herbruger, and Senora de Herbruger, are at the Mayflower while the embassy is getting slicked up for occupancy. They have brought only one of their three children with them. She's Doris, who's 14. There's a son, Rodolfo, jr., who is studying at the University of Miami, and another daughter, married and living in California.

One of the Herbrugers' good friends here is Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, former Ecuador Ambassador, whom they met when they used to visit Washington some years back.

The new Ambassador is a well-known industrialist in his own country and accepted his first diplomatic post with a desire only for public service.

Mary Haworth's Mail

European Reader, Interested in Psychiatry Because Many Friends Have Been Strengthened By It, Favors Adler's Theories Over Freud's

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You cannot imagine with what interest we turn to your column each day in the American newspaper in Europe.

I have just read your article of January 4 in which a man asks what to do about his wife, who, although cured by an analyst of a chronic heart ailment, now has no interest in her husband, home or children, due to her extreme dependency upon and infatuation for her doctor.

You indicate that her fixation upon the analyst is simply another symptom in a chain of symptoms, all of which refer to a tangle of underlying fears of life. You say that figuratively speaking she is a refugee from morbid anxieties and that in the analytic set-up she feels as if she had found sanctuary at long last, hence the heart distress subsides and, at that point, she is willing to drop her quest for health and simply lean on the analyst.

Adlerian Therapy Helps Immediately

YOU ADVISE the exasperated husband to take his complaints to his wife's analyst, for inside information on how to cope with her latest symptoms. In my judgment, that is good advice. It seems a sensible approach to "the heart of the matter." But still the man's letter raises in my mind a question as to whether the analyst selected by the wife is the best one for her.

With those of my friends who have been to Freudian specialists, the treatment has been long and seemingly unduly protracted, with the patient being wholly dependent upon the doctor during months or years of treatment. In this time, when the patient needed strength and confidence to cope directly with personal problems, he (or she) would feel particularly helpless.

On the other hand, my friends who were treated by Adler's adherents became steadily better from the day of the first interview. They found one talk better than none, two talks better than one, etc., whereas in the practice of the pure Freudians a few talks may leave one worse off than before one started, unless one can stick through a deep analysis—and many persons haven't the money or the ability to do this.

Adler's Adherents By-Pass Transference

IT SEEMS the Adlerians succeed in strengthening the person in need of help. They do not believe in transference and people going to them do not become excessively dependent. They are helped to stand on their own feet and cope self reliantly with their problems.

Therefore if the wife in question could go to an Adlerian therapist, she might find a permanent cure of her heart symptoms, and also find a real zest for tackling the every day problems that life with husband and children entails. I know the theory that a patient's transference is supposed to help in unburdening the problem, but if the doctor in her case can't remove the dependency "block," then it seems logical to wonder how able he is.

Whenever you suggest pyschiatric help—always appropriately, I think—I always hope that the needy person will find the right specialist. The right ones can do so much good, and the wrong ones so little, alas.

Diplomacy Advisable in Blocked Cases

DEAR L. B.: Thank you for a sympathetic viewpoint. But perhaps I should explain that in cases where psychiatric treatment seems blocked, due to the patient's inert attitudes and the doctor's bafflement, the best specialists in an outsider role would be constructively reluctant to intrude disconcerting criticism of the patient's choice of helper.

The patient might be thrown into a catastrophic depression, and his chances of recovery gravely jeopardized, if his "last straw" illusion of trustworthy protection were abruptly taken from him. And that's why I didn't interject advice to change doctors in this instance, and instead encouraged the husband to look into the analytic exchange himself—in the hope that he would then perceive whether the doctor knows what's going on and how to resolve it, or whether he perhaps needs volunteer help in releasing the patient to other care.

DAR, CAR Join in Honoring Washington; Japanese Women Leaders to Visit Capital

By Genevieve Reynolds

SOME 500 members of patriotic women's organizations joined with their husbands and brothers to observe the 218th birthday anniversary of George Washington in in an impressive ceremony held yesterday at the Interior Department auditorium.

It was the thirty-sixth joint celebration honoring the founder of this country given by the Daughters of the American Revolution, Children of the American Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution and Sons of the Revolution.

The colorful program of songs and tributes to George Washington was given under the auspices of the District DAR with Mrs. David L. Wells, State regent, as general chairman and presiding officer.

Arranging the entire program was a joint committee composed of Mrs. Wells, Mrs. James D. Skinner, of the DAR, vice chairman; Miss Marshall Brooke of the CAR, secretary, and W. Harvey Wise, SAR.

Miss Mamie F. Hawkins, DAR State chaplain, read George Washington's prayer. Greetings were brought by Miss Margaret C. Smith, senior State president of the CAR, and Miss Caroline Brown, CAR junior State president. Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig of the D. C. DAR was a soloist on the program.

Principal address of the day was made by Maj. Gen. Clovis E. Byers, USA. (See story on Page B1.

Special guests included the Thailand Ambassador, Prince Wan Waithayakon and Princess Wan Waithayakon.

PARTICIPATING in a joint celebration of the 218th anniversary of the birth of George Washington yesterday were (left to right) Mrs. David L. Wells, District State Regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Miss Margaret C. Smith, senior president of the D. C. Society, Children of the American Revolution, and Maj. Gen. Clovis E. Japanese Women Leaders To Visit Capital

Some 35 Japanese women leaders will visit the Nation's Capital this week and next. They have come to this country to observe all aspects of democratic life. Some will have a look-see at Government operations, feminine club life and politics. Others will observe schools and colleges.

First to arrive here are three prominent Japanese women educators—Miss Ali Hoshino, president of Tsuda College for Women in Tokyo; Mrs. Yuriko Moriya, supervisor of women's education in the Japanese ministry of education, and Dr. Takeko Yoshida, chemistry professor in the Ochanomizu University for Women in Tokyo. These are among a group of 25 educational leaders who came here under the auspices of the Office of Education to observe educational methods. The trio will hold a press conference 10:30 a. m. today at the American Association of University Women's national headquarters, 1634 I st. nw.

Next to come will be another group of 10 Japanese women leaders. When the group arrives here March 1 they will be greeted by members of the Soroptimist Club of Washington. At 7 p. m. that day the group will be guests of the Soroptimist Club at a reception and buffet supper. This welcoming event will inaugurate widespread entertainment for the distinguished visitors during their stay in the Nation's Capital. Currently the Nipponese women leaders are in New York City.

They are the first group of Japanese political, club and labor leaders to visit the United States under the Department of the Army's Far East Command exchange-of-persons program. They will spend three months in the country observing operation of governmental and private agencies.

The Sorops will join with other women's clubs in arranging programs for the visitors during their sojourn in Washington.

Other participating organizations include the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Association of Junior Leagues of America, League of Women Voters of the United States and the Young Women's Christian Association.

Among these Japanese visitors are Miss Tsuneko Akamatsu, member of the House of Councillors and of the Central Committee of the Social Democrat Party.

Miss Shun Goto, vice chief of the Women's Section, Democratic Liberal Party, is also a board member of the New Japan Women's League, an organization for nonpartisan political education.

Your Figure, Madame

Make Your Diet a Challenge

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE'S more than one way to tackle a slimming diet. You can go at it with grim determination and clenched teeth . . . and hate every minute of it. You'll resist the slightest calorie restriction and feel resigned that the going will be tough. That way it will be . . . you get what you expect.

Take a new slant . . . change the way you look at reducing. Make it a challenge, not an ordeal. Then it can be stimulating. Even the doing can be interesting.

How? Start by appreciating the science of nutrition that makes it possible to have plenty of good food on a diet. Realizing you are in on a good thing keeps you from feeling deprived.

In that frame of mind, instead of lamenting that you have to cook for a hungry family, which you have regarded as the sole cause of the excess pounds, you'll look at it this way . . . you're the cook and can fix everything the willpower-building menus call for . . . and so on with the slimming.

Pie Can't Equal Good Figure

EVEN when preparing a favorite dessert for the family, rather than feeling put-upon, take this slant . . . a few minutes enjoyment of eating a piece of pie isn't in it with getting a good figure.

But treat yourself right—substitute something for the fattening dessert. It's no help to sit and look at an empty plate. Have ambrosia, or a piece of luscious fruit, or crackers and a favorite cheese . . . and you'll feel far better off eating this special dessert than you would be eating the fattening fare. Just that trick of thinking differently kills the temptation. It really works.

This is a positive way of dieting—thinking about all the foods you can have while turning excess pounds back into energy. Do not think of the things you have to give up, bemoaning the fact . . . for that kind of concentrtaion keeps your mind on the forbidden foods. Do not even say "I will not eat this"—that's half negative. Think, "All this and streamling, too!"

Good Nutrition Keeps Young

ANOTHER lift is to realize that this is perfect nutrition — you are on "keeping-young" menus.

Let me make it clear here and now—it will do no good to reduce your weight if you continue thinking as usual. You will not only be unhappy the whole time on the diet, but sooner or later you'll go back to fattening fare.

The secret is to change your thinking with your food habits. Start thinking like a slim, attractive woman . . . that you would rather be vitally alive and unencumbered with excess baggage than you would to overeat! Then keeping normal weight will be normal.

Action for today: Think this through! And eat for streamlines.

Prize-Winning Sewing Contest Opens March 1

ARE YOU making one—or all—of your own costumes for spring, 1950? Then you'll want to enter The Washington Post sewing contest, which opens March 1, continues until April 15. Prizes will be awarded in eight classifications—first prizes of $50 each; second prizes of $25 each. The classifications are described in the entry blank printed at the left.

A contest entry blank will also be printed in Sunday's women's section, with a story by Fashion Editor Peggy Preston on significant style trends of 1950. Miss Preston suggests ways to incorporate these trends in the dress, suit, or coat you enter in the prize-winning contest.

Rules to remember when you enter the contest are:

1. Be sure every entry blank is completely filled out.
2. Baste entry blank to garment.
3. Package garment carefully. Print name and return address on outside. Insure when mailing.
4. Mail or bring entry to—The Washington Post Sewing Contest

IN THIS PLEASANT LIBRARY, George Mason is believed to have drafted the famous Virginia Declaration of Rights. "... life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness ..." Mason's words, lived on in the Declaration of Independence, and his Virginia Declaration of Rights was incorporated in the Bill of Rights, the first 10 Amendments to the Constitution

THIS IS THE CENTER HALL and stairway of the famous old Mason home, whose visitors have included George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, the Marquis de Lafayette—on down to Calvin Coolidge, Woodrow Wilson and Herbert Hoover. The bureau on the left is one of the few original pieces of Mason's furniture in the house

Charm of Colonial Days Recreated at Gunston Hall

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

A HUNDRED yards or so to the southwest of his historic home lies the body of George Mason, who came up with a loaded phrase about "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" many years ago.

More than once—there at Gunston Hall, about 17 miles from Washington—he discussed such things with George Washington and Thomas Jefferson, historians say. And Mason's Virginia Declaration of Rights became the basis of Jefferson's Bill of Rights.

Today, work is well under way to restore Gunston Hall to what it was about the time those three gentlemen were conversing under its steep pitched, gable roof.

So reports Brig. Gen. R. Latant Montague, USMC (retired), superintendent of Mason's gracious old estate. He has the same task before him that once had to be carried out at Mount Vernon.

Gunston Hall's 550 acres are on the Potomac River about five miles below Mount Vernon. The estate passed out of the Mason family's hands in 1866, and into disrepair. Squatters ripped paneling from the walls for firewood. Mules were stabled in the basement.

In Disrepair

In 1912, the estate was purchased by the late Louis Hertle, former Chicago department store executive. From then until his death last September, Mr. Hertle worked to restore it. With his death, Gunston Hall was deeded to the State of Virginia.

Under his deed, the estate is managed by a board of regents of the Colonial Dames of America. General Montague is the board's representative and lives at Gunston Hall.

Phase one of restoration, that of determining the original paint that covered the woodwork, and replacing it, was completed last week. Experts scraped through as many as seven layers of paint before coming to the original one, General Montague says.

Phase One Completed

The superintendent also has located the foundations of two old buildings, one a school, the other possibly a kitchen, that once stood in front of the old mansion. In time, these may be replaced.

He is deep in research, too, in an effort to establish just how the brick home was furnished by Mason. And, he reports, "we're constantly trying to run down Mason relics," with which to furnish the place.

Built in 1755

Gunston Hall was built from 1755 to 1758. It is considered one of the best examples of Georgian architecture of the Colonial period. Within, intricate hand-carving by William Buckland, an indentured architect, is said to be unparalleled in Virginia. Outside, the boxwood walk, with shrubs about 12 feet tall, is believed the oldest of its kind in America.

The mansion's main floor is built on the center hall plan, with the library and dining rooms on one side and the Chinese Chippendale and Palladian rooms on the other.

Upstairs are four large bedrooms and three baths. On this floor, there is another restoration project: Mason originally had nine tiny bedrooms on the second floor—one for each of his nine children.

Gunston Hall may be reached by automobile by turning left off United States Route 1, 1½ miles south of Pohick Church, proceeding about 4 miles and then turning left again onto the property. Visitors are welcome every day of the week from 9:30 a. m. to 5 p. m.

BRIG. GEN. R. LATANE MONTAGUE, USMC (retired), superintendent of Gunston Hall, home of George Mason, examines some of the intricate hand carving featured throughout the old Georgian house. Hand carving was done by an indentured artisan named William Buckland, a master at his trade, when the house was built in 1755-58

Tinker, Tailor? You Can Learn Tailoring Anyway—in Spare Time, Too, at YWCA Classes

WHAT? NO RINSING?—These two cheerful misses are using a new detergent introduced in Washington this week. Clothes go straight from the washing machine through the wringer when it is used. Developed after five years of research, it leaves all the dirt in the water so that rinse is unnecessary

DEAR ANNE:

I am interested in taking a class in tailoring and wonder if you happen to know of any near Parkfairfax, where I live. Since I have small children and transportation is a problem with me, I would like to find something nearby.

K. G. W.

The YWCA Parkfairfax Club plans to start a class in tailoring this month, the meetings to be held in the apartments of members. It will be taught by Mrs. Vernon P. Robnett, a graduate of Pratt Institute, as an extension of the Alexandria YWCA program. The class starts Monday evening, February 27, at 7:30 p. m. To enroll, call Mrs. Frank Stanne, Temple 7934.

HERE'S more news for readers who want to put their lamps in the shade the homemade way:

Montgomery County Thrift Shop, 4715 Hampden lane, Bethesda, has a variety of second-hand shade frames for sale. They range in size from small boudoir to large floor lamps. Some are still covered with old materials, which you can easily remove in order to recover them.

All were donated to the shop, which raises money for Montgomery County welfare work. They're in good condition and sell for a low price, says Mrs. T. L. Gunther, who was kind enough to send us this information. For more details, call the shop at Wisconsin 9843.

DEAR ANNE:

In regard to M. M. D.'s request about odd-sized shoes, there is an endowed foundation in Rhode Island which sells new single shoes reasonably. It is: The Benefit Shoe Corp., Bristol, R. I. M.M.

DEAR ANNE:

In reply to R. G.'s request of January 30 for a recipe for Marrow Dumplings, I am sending the one used and enjoyed for several generations in my family—only we use them in noodle soup (home made, of course!) rather than with spareribs.

By the way, where can one get a good marrow bone? Where do m-b's go nowadays?

MARROW DUMPLINGS

Rub: 1 heaping tablespoon of marrow to a cream
Add: 1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
Season with: ¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg (Get the whole nutmeg and grate if possible)
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh parsley
Add: 3 tablespoons dry, grated bread crumbs
Fold in: 1 egg white, beaten to stiff froth

Make into 12 balls, handling lightly. Bear in mind that they will almost double in size as they cook. Drop into boiling soup (or juice from meat) and boil six minutes.

E. J. T.
Waterford, Va.

THANKS TO E.J.T.: Mrs. Clarence S. Williams of Charlottesville, Va.; D.A.S. and H.C.M., of Washington, all of whom contributed family recipes for old-fashioned Marrow Dumplings.

In answer to your question, E.J.T., you can get marrow from almost any sizable soup bone if you get the butcher to crack it open for you. The butcher in a Washington fancy grocery tells me that in years when meat was more plentiful, the shop often cracked the bones and sold marrow by the pound. Now, you must crack your own.

DEAR ANNE:

Do you know where I can buy transfer ink for making transfer patterns that can be pressed onto material?

ELIZABETH W. GRIMM.

After a check of department store needlework and stationary departments, stationary and art supply stores in the area, we too are stumped on this one. Any suggestions, readers?

John Ford's First Comedy a Delight

By Richard L. Coe

THE CAPITOL has a good show this week, with lots of laughs in "When Willie Comes Marching Home" and a trim stage bill.

"When Willie Comes Marching Home" is John Ford's first try at comedy. The maker of such distinguished pictures as "The Informer" and "Stagecoach" has managed some uproarious scenes which delighted yesterday's packed holiday house, and while I think he was afraid to let himself go completely in this one, it seems to me that after a few more comedies he will give us something very special in that line.

When "Willie" is being sharp about the inanities of Army life, it's at its best, but there is a tendency toward sentimentality that slows up the picture. This, it seems to me, is largely due to Ford's—and his writers'—care in being affectionate at the cost of beclouding the humor.

This accent on the gentle, the affectionate, caters, to be sure, to our accepted national trait of sentimentality. The effort to be kindly and mocking at the same time is probably exactly what Ford intended, but what a sharply amusing picture it might have been. It's the sort of story the British would have treated with wry, dry humor; the French would have filmed it with weary bitterness; the Italians with an earthy, hard accent.

This story concerns a fellow who's first to enlist in his home town after Pearl Harbor. He gets through to flight training, but washes out. In gunnery he does better, is sent to the new airfield near his West Virginia home town and gets a great welcome from the home folks.

Now a gunnery instructor, he's stuck at the field, and soon the home folks are thinking of him as just a goldbrick. The war goes on, North African, Italian landings, with the second front imminent. Even a dog picks on him.

Finally The Big Chance comes. Popped on a B-17 as a gunner at the last minute, he has a full three days; in France (there by accident) he sees the first V-2 bombs launched, is rushed to Whitehall and the Pentagon to report at first hand. Given a furlough, he's back in his home town four days after he left it, either a looney, as his folks think, or a hero, as the Army sees it.

"WHEN WILLIE COMES MARCHING HOME." Twentieth Century-Fox release produced by Fred Kohlmar. Screen play by Mary Loos and Richard Sale from a story by Sy Gomberg. Music by Alfred Newman. Photographed by Leo Tover. Directed by John Ford. At the Capitol.

Good Audience Laughs

This makes, as you can imagine, for good novelty as screen comedy. And there are certainly laughs galore. But the story and direction, as a whole, tosses from outright sentiment (conjuring up of an era remembered by us all) to satire (Army red tape) to outright slapstick (when Willie washes out as a pilot) to melodramatic adventures (with the Maquis in France). Had one level of approach been consistently hewn to throughout the picture, I think its mood and pace would have been far more rewarding.

The fact remains, it's a good audience picture, and if our national penchant for sentimentality has been overly catered to, such may contain more wisdom than one individual's entirely personal taste.

Dan Dailey works hard and largely effectively as Willie, but it seemed to me Evelyn Varden was most on the button as his disbelieving mother. Colleen Townsend is pretty, in the accepted style, as his girl friend, and Corinne Calvet appears briefly as the Maquis' feminine brains. And William Demarest is amusing as Willie's father.

THE CAPITOL'S stage bill is good variety all the way down the line, opening with the ineffable Kay DeWitt and Dr. Kaufman's pit band, with Milt Slosser piling in to make people sing . . . Marian and Miller, an exceptionally attractive pair, turn in a smooth adagio turn that's the best show-opener in weeks . . . Toni Arden, a disc favorite, sings those ballads in the off-beat-whisperin'-shouting' style. ("There smuchdisuh-LOOOOOOO-SHUN-therrrrr," she alternately whispers and bellows, pretty thing) . . . Two Choral Units Heard In Requiem

By Paul Hume

Ash Wednesday was observed in the grand manner by the National Symphony Orchestra last night in Constitution Hall.

The Washington and Cathedral Choral Societies, under the direction of Paul Callaway, sang Verdi's Requiem with the orchestra. Soloists were Ruth Diehl, Frances Lehnerts, David Lloyd and James Pease. The orchestra was augmented by a quartet of trumpets placed in the right balcony.

Verdi's conception of the text of the Requiem Mass is not unlike that of Dante's glimpse of the Final Judgment in the Inferno. Orchestra and chorus burst into overwhelming cries and the shudders of fearful souls are heard from the lowest voices and instruments.

The music stands precisely between Aida and Otello in time of writing. It also belongs midway between them in style, vocal line, and the handling of both voices and orchestra.

Callaway's chorus sang with impeccable tone, and pitch. Precision was admirable except in the Sanctus and the "Rex tremendae" where there was momentary trouble. It was amazing to hear so large a group sing so quietly and with model clarity. Even greater credit is their due since they were required, for reasons of space, to stand throughout the performance.

The soloists were of high caliber, though not one of them is the dramatic voice for the music. It is music for Ponselles and Giglis. Ruth Diehl shone in the constancy of her work. We have never heard her sing so easily, covering a wide range of color. She commands the meaning of this score and projects it superbly.

David Lloyd was equally effective in his tenor assignment. He controls his voice to perfection, never forcing it to meet dramatic moments. Frances Lehnerts varied from moments of inaudibility in the lower part of her voice to fine tones in the higher register.

James Pease has a rich voice in the back of his throat. At times he sounded well, but most of the time he did not reflect the true sound of sense of his lines.

The growth of Paul Callaway, this gifted conductor, in the last five years has been a steady, unwavering ascent to the finest levels of musicianly direction in every school of music.

Shuberts Defend Firm's Record

New York, Feb. 22 (AP).—Lee Shubert said today he and his brother, Jacob, have "every confidence" that they will be able to disprove monopoly charges leveled against their theatrical enterprises in Washington, D. C., and other cities.

The Government yesterday filed a civil antitrust suit against the Shuberts, accusing the Shuberts, who built up their half a century of having a stranglehold on the Nation's legitimate stage.

Besides the Shuberts, the Justice Department complaint names their associate, Marcus Heiman, and three corporations said to be controlled by them—United Booking Office, Inc.; Select Theaters Corp., and L. A. B. Amusement Corp.

Heiman is the owner of the National Theater, a legitimate theater converted to a movie house in 1948. The Schuberts owned the Belasco here and kept it dark for several years to eliminate competition for the National, the Federal Government has charged. In 1940 the Belasco was sold to the Government.

[On Tuesday, Heiman said his United Booking Office did not favor any theater over competing theaters. He did not mention the National Theater charges. Editor's Note.]

The Shuberts were accused of controlling or having an interest in 17 of New York's 32 legitimate theaters, all 6 in Boston, all 4 in Philadelphia, 7 of the 9 in Chicago and others in Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Detroit, Baltimore and Washington, D. C.

"We shall be able to demonstrate beyond all doubt that we have never engaged in anything that could possibly be construed as a violation of the anti-trust laws," he asserted.

SINCE I am the ranking authority on Gordon MacRae—having seen him in a movie once and having engaged him in the shortest interview on record—I thought it would be reasonable yesterday to go over to the Metropolitan and see him in a film called "Backfire." This proved to be a brilliant thought, since it got me in out of the rain and off the streets, where the surging mobs of women shoppers made life a thing of peril.

Well, "Backfire." It's another one about the fellow whose innocent pal, a former war buddy, to be sure, is being hunted down like a thief on the presumption that he killed a man. MacRae, against the advice of the cops, turns amateur detective and cleans everything up nicely, except that innocent pal and war buddy, played by Edmond O'Brien, is left with a broken back. MacRae is very earnest about these jobs and I found him entirely inoffensive.

Clark's Too Young

Dane Clark, who plays both another war buddy and a big time hoodlum, is too boyish for the latter impersonation and keeps you wondering why somebody doesn't simply stand him in the corner. He is called on to upper case Act at one point and it's a little discomfiting.

O'Brien does very well, though there's not enough of him. Same for Viveca Lindfors, a Danish actress working in Hollywood. I think Miss Lindfors is a woman of extraordinary beauty and she may even be a fine actress. Filmland appears to be doing its best not to find it out. Virginia Mayo plays MacRae's girl friend. She is good to look at and handles some meager material quite adequately.

Shooting and Strangling

The movie contains two shootings and one strangling and a man is purposely crushed by a car. It is fast enough melodrama and sags only here and there, usually where somebody thought some real sharp dialogue might snap things up. There's only one real error: At the end, when O'Brien is discharged from the hospital after his broken back, MacRae and Miss Mayo rustle up and haul him away in a jeep. The jeep, as us old GIs can tell you, is precisely the animal you don't use to transport a man with a fragile keel.

Monte Blue is in "Backfire." I missed him clean.

There are a couple of laughs in the cartoon. The newsreel shows David Lilienthal taking leave of the Government. Anent the atom, Mr. L. says, "Let's keep our shirts on." Sounded like good counsel to me.

Dr. Sander Taken With Jury To Scene of Patient's Death

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 22 (AP).—Dr. Hermann N. Sander stood poker-faced today and looked into the doorway of the hospital room where his "mercy death" patient died.

For the first time since the start of his trial for murder, his wife was not with the doctor as he accompanied the 13-man jury to the Hillsboro County Hospital.

The jury had been completed at the morning session of the trial.

Throughout a half-hour visit in the hospital the doctor showed no emotion. He stood silent—occasionally with his hands in his pockets.

He looked in the doorway of the room which Attorney General William L. Phinney said was the room of Mrs. Abbie Borroto, 59, the cancer-ridden housewife Dr. Sander is accused of killing.

Just before leaving for the hospital, Dr. Sander had heard again the reading of the indictment which charged he injected "10 cubic centimeters of air four times in close succession" into her veins.

The indictment adds—"well knowing the said air injections to be sufficient to cause death."

Completion of the all-male jury—nine Catholics and four Protestants—came just before the noon recess today on the third day of a trial that has drawn world-wide attention.

The jury reflects the complexion of this industrial center, both in their occupation and their religion. Most are mill and factory workers.

Interest in the religion of the jurors developed as a result of the outspoken stand taken by some groups—particularly the Roman Catholic Church—against any form of "mercy killing."

During the questioning of prospective jurors, the religious issue was raised by some veniremen themselves.

One told the court "I'm a Catholic. I'm against mercy killing;" another, "It doesn't seem to me religion is on trial here, sir;" and another, "God," alone, decides when a person is to die."

Dr. Sander's lawyers have given no indication they would plead "mercy killing." The doctor himself signed Mrs. Borroto's death certificate as "cancer."

Both the defense and prosecution have lined up some of the Nation's top medical experts. Their testimony is bound to play an important role in the case

Marine Arrested In Father's Death

Their Kiss Felt . . Throughout Town

CHARLOTTE McCLAIN

RIDDELL RIGGS

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

Riddell Riggs, 16, kissed Charlotte McClain, also 16, when he crowned her basketball queen of Bethany, Okla., and today a citizens' committee is drafting legal papers to oust the high school superintendent and the entire school board. Members of the Nazarene Church predominate Bethany, a blue law city, where kissing is taboo, along with cigarettes, beer and women in shorts. The citizens' committee will charge the school officials with "incompetence and permiting a religious sect to dominate policies," it was said

Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 22 (AP).—A Marine sergeant wanted in the bizarre "family secret" slaying of his father was arrested today near Ashfork, Ariz. No formal charge was made against him, but it was said a first degree murder warrant would be asked Thursday.

Carson James, 28, had been the object of a Nationwide hunt after the skeleton of his father was unearthed beneath a cowshed last night. It was touched off by a conscience-stricken sister's story of the killing of their father, Stanley James, 54, at a Thanksgiving family party in 1947.

The hunt for Carson stretched from Washington, D. C., to China Lake (Calif.) Marine base.

It was in Washington that Mrs. Muriel Hockensmith, who teaches at the Clara Barton School in Cabin John, Md., first implicated her brother in the 2-year-old slaying. She called Clawson (Mich.) police to report it Tuesday because of "fear and conscience." She said James had threatened her on a recent visit.

Sheriff Claire L. Hubbell said the James family of eight had kept the slaying and cowshed burial a secret, having pledged themselves at a Christmas meeting following the death never to reveal it.

Family at Liberty

Clyde D. Underwood, prosecutor, ordered all members of the family left at liberty, except Carson, two twin brothers, 15, when their father was killed, were held briefly for questioning yesterday.

Mrs. Ruth James, 54-year-old mother of the family, was quoted by Underwood as saying her automobile factory worker husband "deserved it," but she "wouldn't have done what Carson did, but it is done and that's that."

"We are happier since his death. I hope they won't be too hard on Carson."

Police Chief Clarence Witt of Clawson, where James lived for a time, brought Mrs. Hockensmith's story to Sheriff Hubbell. In lantern light last night, Stanley James' bones were unearthed four feet under the cowshed where she said they would be found.

Passed Night With Father

Hubbell quoted members of the family as telling him that since there was no room in their home for Carson the night of the Thanksgiving reunion, he went to Clawson to pend the night with his father.

Next morning, the sheriff said he was told, Carson walked into the house, saying his father's body was in the car, that he had been slain in a struggle for a gun, following an argument between them.

Hubbell said neighbors were told the elder James had suffered a mental collapse, and had been "put away," and that since he was unpopular in the community no one bothered further.

Meantime in Washington, Police Inspector Robert S. Bryant said Washington officials had been told of the murder several days ago. The information, he said, was forwarded to the authorities in Michigan. He denied an assertion by Mrs. Hockersmith's husband that District of Columbia police were uncooperative.

Commission Urged to Study Idleness in Md.

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22.—Governor Lane will be asked to appoint a commission to study Maryland's unemployment and welfare problem under terms of a resolution to be proposed by the House banking committee.

Decision to introduce the resolution came during a hearing today on a bill to establish county work programs for unemployed employables. Sponsor of the bill, Delegate Horace P. Whitworth, jr., (R., Allegany) said it was needed because of a "great deal" of unemployment in the county.

Much of the unemployment, it has been pointed out, stems from layoffs at Cumberland's Celanese Corp. plant.

Milton J. Patterson, director of the State welfare department, said it was a good idea, but asked "where are we going to get the money to carry it out?"

Among specifics mentioned were a system of rotation of persons working on public projects, such as clerical or maintenance work, while receiving the relief. Committee members pointed out that if there were only a third as many jobs as persons on relief, some persons would have to work for money which other persons would get without work.

Record Budget In Maryland Goes to Senate

By Whitney Shoemaker

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 22 (AP).—Governor Lane's mammoth $144,202,844 appropriations bill moved into the open today with the blessing of the Senate finance committee.

The committee's favorable report gave his unprecedented budget its first big boost in this short session of the General Assembly.

It came to a temporary stop on the Senate floor, however, when Majority Leader Sothoron (D., Prince Georges) offered a minor amendment. That forced the bill to lay over until tomorrow.

Including the supplemental budget Lane submitted two nights ago, the bill breaks down this way:

Budget for the 1951 fiscal year, beginning July 1: $143,556,588 (including $80,339,979 in general funds and $63,216,609 in special funds).

Deficiency appropriations for the remainder of the 1950 fiscal year: $646,256 (including $602,718 in general funds and $43,538 in special funds).

Deficiency allowances to finance current undertakings of the department of welfare and others had not figured in previous budget discussions, or tabulations.

In other action, five Democrats lined up with the 11 Senate Republicans to keep alive a GOP proposal that the tax rate on the first $500 of investment income be cut from 5 to 2 percent.

An administration bill to permit the 2 percent rate when unearned income does not exceed $500 and a person's total earnings are not more than $50,000 already had cleared the Senate and gained a favorable House committee report today.

'Mr. Jones, Meet the Master'

Andrew's Story Underlines Importance of the Rank and File

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

By Dr. Peter Marshall

THE SAINT OF THE RANK AND FILE

In Any List of the apostles, most of us would begin by naming the triumvirate—
Peter
James and John, and then we go like this:
Peter . . . James . . . and John . . . and Matthew . . . and Judas of course . . . and . . . and Philip . . . and Oh, yes, Thomas . . . let's see . . . and . . . and . . . who were the rest anyway?
Most of us know nothing much about Andrew—except that he was Peter's brother, and one of the apostles.
But we ought to know Andrew better than that, because we see him every day.
He is the man who sits beside you on the bus.
He may be the fellow who blows the mailman's whistle down the street . . . or drives the street-car . . .
or waits on you in the store . . .
or works at the next desk in your office . . .
or sells you your ticket at the railroad station, or even carries your bags.
Andrew is all around you.
You meet him every day, and he holds the key to many situations.
But first, let us begin at the beginning.
Andrew's boyhood home was Bethsaida of Galilee.
It lay about seventy miles north of Jerusalem on the Sea of Galilee.
It was there that Jesus found five of His twelve disciples—John and James, Philip, Peter and Andrew.
In Bethsaida we inquire for the house of Jonas, where live the two brothers Peter and Andrew, who with their father operate a fishing boat on the Sea of Galilee.
We find that Andrew is not at home, but they point out to us the house of Zebedee where we may find him.
As we approach, we see two young men in earnest conversation with an old man who must be Zebedee, the father of James and John. The younger men are talking about a journey they hope to make down the Jordan to a ford, where they have heard a daring young preacher was drawing great crowds with a stirring message about the coming Kingdom of God.
"Yes, John," Zebedee is saying, "Andrew is just the companion. You want to take him with you rather than Simon. If Simon went along, he would do all the talking. He would even do your thinking for you.
Why don't you two go by yourselves?
And if Simon should insist on going with you—you and Andrew stay together. Make up your own minds.
And may the peace and blessing of God go with you."
We remember what happened when they arrived at the place. They heard the message of John the Baptist—a strange man who with piercing glowing eyes and eloquent tongue stirred them as they had never been stirred before.
In a very short time their attention was shifted from him to Another, Who, when He came, was announced by John as "The Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."
Later, they met Jesus and spent some time in personal conversation with Him, and pledged themselves to become His disciples.
And the very first thing that Andrew did after he found Jesus was to search out his own brother, Simon, and introduce him to Christ.
Andrew went with Jesus when He came to Galilee and was present when Jesus worked His first miracle.
Andrew saw Him at the marriage in Cana, saw Jesus with laughter in His eyes and smiles tugging at the corners of His mouth.
Andrew was with Him in Judea when He baptized there.

There is something significant in the fact that Andrew was the first of the apostles to be called.
The choice was important, for it was the example of Andrews, the lead he gave
and the influence he brought to bear upon the others that to a large extent decided them.
Christ saw right away that the soul's unrest, the straining after higher things, and the deeper knowledge of God which made Andrew walk from Bethsaida to Bethany indicated a promise of large spiritual growth and a fertile field in which the steed could be cast.
Andrew has usually been referred to as Simon Peter's brother.
He himself was not a leader of men . .
He was not aggressive like Simon.
We find him usually playing second fiddle to his famous brother, and we know perfectly well that it takes a lot of grace to play second fiddle.
It is not easy to live out your life day after day and week after week and year after year in a subordinate position while somebody else gets the notice, the publicity
the attention the credit the praise
the spotlight and perhaps the reward.
It takes a lot of grace to accept a role like that, and yet Andrew seems never to have complained.
When we look into the lives of these two brothers, it must be admitted that Andrew was not the great preacher Peter was. He was not the great missionary leader who helped established churches that were to spring up like flowers in the wilderness,
But it must never be forgotten that it was Andrew who brought Peter to Christ.
Andrew first comes to our attention introducing his own brother Simon to the Lord.
Here now, he is introducing Greeks.
He really might be called Andrew the Introducer.
Andrew is not one of the greatest of the disciples, but he is typical of those men of broad sympathy and sound common sense, without whom the success of any great movement cannot be assured.
It is all very well to be impressed with the contributions to human happiness that are made by the world's leaders—the great men and women—the five-talent people who do things
do them well and who usually get the notice the publicity
the praise
and the rewards.
But what we are all inclined to forget is the fact that behind them are unnumbered hosts of ordinary men and women whose names are never printed whose faces are never captured by the newsreel cameras but whose quiet unassuming labor makes the work of the leaders possible.
How could I sum them up?
A self-effacing ministry to those in need.
A willingness to play second fiddle, if need be, in order that the job can be done.
You see, it is the Andrews that are the glory of any democracy . . . the people who do the mundane things of our work-a-day life.
For example, think of the garbage collectors.
Do you realize how important they are?
Theirs is not a pleasant job, but there are few jobs more important to the health and well-being of all of us.
You see, it is the Andrews after all who carry on the work of the nation and of the church.
For after all the five-talent men and women have flashed like meteors through the skies leaving behind a trail of glory after their great gifts for organization after all their visions and their plans they depend upon Andrew to do the job.
So, the success of the whole business largely depends upon Andrew, for Andrew was interested in people and Andrew brought them to Christ.
Only as the church today is interested in people and will bring them to Christ can the work go forward.
The work that needs to be done today is the work that Andrew is best able to do.
It is the work of the ordinary men and women in the church, and Andrew is their patron saint.
It is not without significance that Andrew was chosen to be the Patron Saint of Scotland, and St. Andrew's cross, a diagonal white cross on a blue ground, is the foundation on which St. George's cross of England and St. Patrick's cross of Ireland were laid to make the Union Jack. Andrew was at the bottom.
It is always so—in everything that is worthwhile—everything that is good and true.
It is supported by Andrew—the two-talent man.
Each time Andrew appears on the New Testament scenes he is introducing someone to Jesus.
"Only two talents?"
Aye, but the two talents are surrendered to Christ.
Andrew, we too would meet the Master!

Senate to Hear Lee Charges

By the United Press

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday voted to investigate charges that Michael J. Lee, a Commerce Department official, sabotaged U. S. aid to Nationalist China for its fight against communism.

Lee is chief of the Far Eastern Division in the Commerce Department's Office of International Trade.

The charges were made recently by Sen. George W. Malone (R., Nev.). He claimed Lee used his official position to hold up shipments of aviation gasoline and vital war supplies to the Chinese Nationalists until they were of no use in the fight against the Communists.

Malone submitted a resolution asking for a full-scale investigation by the Senate committee. Chairman Edwin C. Johnson, (D., Colo.), said he would appoint a five-man subcommittee to make the inquiry.

In his Senate speech, Malone also said Lee's original name was Ephraim Zinovi Liberman and that he was born in Manchuria of Russian parents. He said Lee was denied U. S. citizenship on three occasions before he changed his name and married an American woman.

The Commerce Department said Malone's charges were old stuff that have been aired before.

Utah Grads to Hear Senator Thomas Feb. 28

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) will address a dinner meeting of Washington alumni of the University of Utah Tuesday, February 28, at the Bethesda Country Club.

Some 200 graduates are expected to attend the dinner, which will celebrate the 100th anniversary of the university.

Glens Falls, N. Y., Hotel Burns

Glens Falls, N. Y. Feb. 22 (U.P.). A pre-dawn fire destroyed the five-story Towers Hotel today. Fifteen persons were injured, including a fireman who was buried under tons of debris.

An estimated 32 guests escaped from the 75-room structure by sliding down ropes made of bedsheets or being carried down ladders by firemen. At least one jumped from upper-level windows.

Hours after the flames were brought under control all guests and hotel employes were accounted for. Earlier it was feared several were missing.

Police estimated damage at $500,000.

The fire was discovered by a night watchman who summoned police and firemen. For over 4 hours, five companies from Glens Falls and three nearby communities hampered by freezing weather and a snow storm, battled the blaze which threatened to spread to nearby buildings.

Police said the first started on the second floor and "within minutes had spread through the building." As the flames mounted, screams for help were heard from the upper floors.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

Big Upset; Aunt Clara Scores Kayo Over Bureaucracy

Mrs. Stanley E. Smigel of Twin Brook, Rockville, Md., should feel mighty proud of her Aunt Clara, who lives in Cleveland.

Personally, I think a statue of Aunt Clara should stand in Public Square. Few who have tangled with bureaucracy and lost will believe this—but Aunt Clara recently brought the Government to its knees in a dispute over $3.

It seems that last October she sent a package to Mrs. Smigel. The package contained two dishes that had belonged to Mrs. Smigel's grandmother. The dishes were insured for $5; but when they arrived, they were completely smashed.

Mrs. Smigel called the postoffice here, and was told: "Write us a letter, giving all the facts." In reply to her letter she received some forms, and filled them out.

Two weeks passed; then the forms were sent to Aunt Clara for her signature. Aunt Clara signed; then still more time elapsed.

Pretty soon the postoffice asked Mrs. Smigel for the original wrapping from the package. She fooled them. She had it, and sent it in.

More delay. Then the postoffice wanted the broken dishes, so they could be appraised. The dishes were sent in.

Months went by, and nothing happened. But at long last the Post Office Department was ready to strike a deal with Aunt Clara. They offered to settle the claim for $2.

The Post Office Department solemnly considered the two appraisals—and bowed to the inevitable. The $2 offer was withdrawn; Aunt Clara last week got a check for the whole $5.

In view of the foregoing, it's hard to understand why some critics complain that the Government hands out public funds indiscriminately. This is not true, it would appear, in amounts of less than a million dollars.

PERSONAL NOTES

Windsor Thompson, Glenn Dale, Md.: Shhhh! The public isn't supposed to know about that.

HEAVENLY DAYS, McGEE

Administration circles are buzzing with a rumor that Senator McCarthy has red corpuscles.

ATTENTION, PLEASE! ARCH NOW BATTING FOR EDDIE

Eddie Gallaher's vacations probably confuse a great many of his WTOP listeners.

When Eddie is off (as he is this week) Arch McDonald pinch hits for him on the morning "Sundial." But Gallaher still does his own "Moondial" show at night.

That's because Eddie always transcribes the "Moondial" in advance anyhow—and it has nothing whatever to do with the story I want to tell.

As most Washington listeners know, McDonald is one of the most informal performers in the business. A large measure of his popularity can probably be attributed to the fact that he just relaxes and lets the chips fall where they may.

The other morning, for example, Arch looked up at the clock and announced that it was 5 minutes to 7. Thousands of listeners whose clocks showed 5 minutes to 8 just chuckled and mused: "That's our Arch."

But not Carter Barron, head man for the Loew Theater chain here, and vice chairman of the Sesquicentennial Commission.

Carter called his good friend Arch and said: "Hey, you're an hour late. It's 5 minutes to 8 now."

"Okay," said Arch, "I'll make a correction."

As soon as the music stopped, McDonald gave the correct time, courtesy of Carter Barron, and then grumbled:

"How about that guy. He's gonna be a year late with that Sesquicentennial, but he picks on me for being an hour late."

McCarran and His Man Dekom

By Drew Pearson

Dictator Franco's friend, Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada, has been using Dictator Franco's methods inside the Senate Judiciary Committee.

In order to smear the Displaced Persons Commission, McCarran held secret hearings without notifying other committee members. It was a virtual star-chamber proceeding. On the other hand, he refused to grant the Displaced Persons Commission a hearing to defend itself.

He also railroaded his own displaced persons bill through the committee, allowing only 15 minutes for the committee to consider a substitute. And as committee chairman, McCarran made his staff director, Richard Arens, more powerful than the Senators who belong to the committee. The situation has become so bad that the Senators and Congressmen, who are forced to deal with Arens, have nicknamed him "super Senator.'

McCarran also fired another staff member, Coleman Rosenberger, whom the Senator from Nevada suspected of being loyal to another Senator.

But worst of all, McCarran has hidden on his staff, Otto J. Dekom, who was kicked out of the Army Signal Corps in 1942, fired by Central Airlines in 1944, and turned down as an investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The following letter about Dekom was sent to the House Un-American Activities Committee by Col. C. C. Blakeney of General Staff Corps in May, 1948:

"Secretary Royall has asked me to reply to your recent request for information concerning Mr. Otto J. Dekom, who has applied for employment on the research staff of the Committee on Un-American Activities.

"According to information contained in the file on Mr. Dekom, he was discharged from his position in the office of the Chief Signal Officer on July 15, 1942, under the provisions of Public Law 703, Seventy-sixth Congress.

"The file also indicates that he was discharged for cause by the Pennsylvania Central Airlines in 1944 under the provisions of War Department Circular 339 (1943), 'suspension of a subversive from privately operated facilities of importance to the war effort.' He appealed this charge to the Industrial Employment Review Board, Office of the Secretary of War, and the decision to discharge him for cause was upheld by that board.

"Based on additional information on file with appropriate agencies of the Department of the Army, I can make no recommendation except for unfavorable consideration. It is the expressed opinion of appropriate staff division that the employment of Mr. Dekom by the Committee on Un-American Activities in any capacity would be most inadvisable."

But in spite of all this, McCarran hired Otto Dekom and assigned him to a trusted job in the Judiciary Committee.

Again applying the tactics of Dictator Franco, McCarran tries to handpick new committee members. While he was visiting Dictator Franco in Spain last summer, Senator Kefauver of Tennessee was assigned to McCarran's Judiciary Committee, and, when he returned, the gentleman from Nevada hit the ceiling.

"How did Kefauver get on this committee?" McCarran stormed. "I don't want him."

However, Kefauver is still on the committee.

John L. Lewis' Judge

Federal Judge Richmond Keech, the man who has been slapping John L. Lewis with those back-to-work court orders, was teethed on law enforcement. His father was a District of Columbia policeman.

However, the 53-year-old jurist is not a chronic "crack-downer," but a quiet, amiable man with a homespun air that belies his black robes. He also has a tremendous liking for people, particularly little people, a characteristic developed in the days when he used to fight consumers' battles against the public utilities as people's counsel of the District.

Later Keech became a member of the Public Utilities Commission and served for a time as corporation counsel of the D. C. government before President Truman recognized his talents.

Today at CENTER MARKET CITY
...with Pat Parker

TOMORROW AND SATURDAY are Orchid Days at Center Market City. We're celebrating our First Anniversary as correspondent for the Market, and our Anniversary gift to you takes the form of glamorous orchids.

WE'VE had them flown in especially for these two days, and we'd love for you to have them as our gifts! These Vanda orchids come with their own little lapel phial—filled with water they keep the orchids fresh while you wear them on a new Spring suit or dress. . .

JUST GO back to the manager's office and ask for your Anniversary Orchid.

OTHER NEWS from the Market includes information that we will now be open SIX DAYS A WEEK. Formerly, we closed on Wednesday afternoons, but now you can plan to do your mid-week shopping on this afternoon.

Our new schedule calls for the Market to be open from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m., and until 7 p. m. on Saturday evenings. So now, in addition to shopping early in the morning, you can shop after working hours.

PERHAPS you didn't know that you can shop as early as 7 in the morning at the Market. There's no better time, for then the produce is fresh, crisp and straight from the countryside. Of course, Center Market City's produce is ALWAYS FRESH and crisp—our customers are always giving us compliments on our pretty fruit and vegetable stands. And it does so much to the appetite, too, to find Spring's bounty in such freshness.

FRED WEIGERT, one of the better-known Center Market merchants, has a supply of bockwurst sausage for you bock beer drinkers. The two are meant to go hand-in-hand, or perhaps we should say, hand-to-mouth, and whether you go for bock beer or not, we know you'll like the bockwurst.

AS A FINAL REMINDER: Do stop by the manager's office tomorrow and Saturday for your orchid. We want you to have one as our gift from
